EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The present report examines the systematic legislative, administrative and other efforts by the Justice and Development Party (AKP) since the beginning of its rule, in particular since 2011 and the aftermath of the July 15, 2016 coup attempt – to permanently Islamize Turkey’s education system.

İmam-Hatip schools, crucial in their role to further the AKP’s political Islam agenda as a breeding ground for radical elements continue to receive extensive political and material support, including through unlawful seizure (theft) of thousands of closed private educational institutions and land. Despite this aid, these schools still perform extremely poorly in all state tests.

The mushrooming of İmam-Hatip schools, the current rise in homegrown radicalization along with the surge in the number of terrorist attacks and victims caused by terrorism show that Turkey’s social fabric is undergoing a very harmful change. It’s possible irreversible damage has already been inflicted to the traditional mainstream understanding of Islam in the country.

The present report further provides an analysis of efforts, begun in 2004, to eradicate the Gülen movement - a renowned movement that combats extremism and radicalization by promoting quality secular education, both nationally and globally.

The Gülen movement represented a major inconvenience to the ruling AKP’s objectives on education, and as such, was targeted from the early days of AKP rule.

The December 2013 corruption scandal and the failed coup attempt of July 15, 2016 were followed by an unprecedented purge targeting citizens from all walks of life, in particular the alleged sympathizers of the Gülen movement in the education system, both in Turkey and abroad. The large-scale assault against the movement started with the introduction of a bill in 2013 to close preparatory schools, aiming to shut down what was widely perceived to be a “major source of revenue for the movement,” and to simultaneously increase AKP influence in the education system.

The report further addresses the devastating effect the measures enacted under the state of emergency have had on primary, secondary, and higher education, in particular on dedicated educators across the country, regardless of their political stances or other convictions. Overnight, these educators became a suspected and oppressed class.

And the, government’s assault on education is still expanding.

By the end of January 2017 the unprecedented assault on education has seen 6,986 academics purged from their positions, along with 41,667 teachers and employees of the Ministry of Education. Tens of thousands of educators across the country have been detained and arrested on very serious charges, with no evidence of wrong doing provided. The assault on the principles of academic freedom and freedom of expression have already dismantled much of the existing structure of Turkish education. Today, the AKP is finalizing its process of asserting total control over Turkey educational institutions.

Finally, the report analyzes the ongoing repression of teachers and the assault on Gülen movement inspired schools abroad. Well-known for their excellence in education the schools constitute one of the largest and strongest counters to radical Islamic trends around the world.

The report concludes that efforts by the Turkish government, inter alia, through its recently established radical subsidiary (the Maarif foundation) to take over Gülen movement inspired schools aim at using them as a springboard in further contributing to youth radicalization and extremism in sovereign countries.

Taking into consideration the unprecedented assault on education, both in Turkey and abroad, the report further concludes that the Islamic transformation of the education system is likely to have long-term implications for Turkey and on the political choices it will make. The rise of radicalization will inevitably have its own cost and long-term negative social and political repercussions in Turkey, the volatile larger Middle East, and also countries where the Maarif foundation would be successful in establishing itself.

In the face of the unprecedented attack on education, key recommendations to the Turkish authorities include the following:

1. Immediate release of all academics, teachers, unionists, students, activists and others who have been detained and imprisoned on unlawful and illegal grounds.
2. Immediate reinstatement to their positions of all academics, teachers, and other personnel, and an end of the repression of teachers, academics, and other education personnel in the country and abroad.
3. Immediate reversal of all legal, administrative and practical measures, as well as all policies and actions that are part of the assault on education, both in Turkey and abroad.

Key recommendations to the international community include:

1. Strongly urge Turkish authorities to end the assault on education, both in the country and abroad.
2. Strongly urge Turkish authorities to end the state of emergency and fully abide by Turkey's obligations under international law and its own domestic legislation.
3. Prevent, in accordance with applicable international human rights law, any forcible return of Turkish teachers or academics at extreme risk to Turkey, or any other place where they face torture, ill-treatment or a real risk to their lives.

Scope and focus of the report

The present report was drafted by the Journalists and Writers Foundation over a 3-months period in an effort to document the unprecedented attack by the Turkish government on education - coinciding with an increasing and widespread assault on education, teachers, academics, and other staff by the government, both in Turkey and abroad.

The report analyzes the current situation of education in Turkey and places it in a logical and consequent timeline with the view of understanding the objectives of the assault through the “bigger picture” and further, the perils associated with the continuing radicalization of youth in Turkey.

The report focuses in particular on the extremely difficult situation faced by teachers, academics, students and other personnel in Turkey and abroad, including arrests, abductions, detentions, threats, dismissals and cancellation of passports.

The Journalists and Writers Foundation is most grateful to all those contributing to the report, in particular all those academics and teachers who, at great personal risk in Turkey and other countries facilitated the drafting of the report.

The Journalists and Writers Foundation dedicates the present report to tens of thousands of devoted Turkish teachers and academics who currently face unprecedented persecution in Turkey and around the world - some of them unfortunately having already paid a heavy price for their commitment to principles and values. They will not be forgotten!

Methodology and structure of the report

The research methodology consisted of the following specific components:

1. Analysis of legislation, state reports, and information obtained through monitoring open sources, (including pro-government media, and press releases by NGOs and international organizations).
2. Communications with victims and their relatives, school principals, teachers and academics.
3. Analysis of the collected data, reports, statements, observations and other evidence.

In many cases described in the report the Journalists and Writers Foundation decided not to reveal the identity of the victims or the sources, in order to protect individuals against eventual reprisals.

The present report is structured according to the Journalist and Writers Foundation major areas of concern:

Part 1 – General Overview

Part 2 – Assault on education in Turkey

Part 3 – Assault on Turkish schools abroad

Part 4 – Conclusions

Part 5 – Annexes

1.2. Constitutional, legislative and administrative framework

Due to a constant emphasis on education since the founding of the Republic, many Turkish laws and regulations focus on education policies and programs. In Turkey's education system relevant policies and programs are guided by Atatürk's opinions and thoughts concerning education, the 1982 Constitution, and the laws governing education and training.

The main principles of the education system in Turkey are provided for in Article 42 of the Constitution. According to the Constitution, “no one shall be deprived of the right of learning and education,” while “primary education is compulsory for all citizens of both sexes and is free of charge in state schools.”

The above provision further states that the education will be based on contemporary scientific and educational principles, under the supervision and control of the State, and does not provide for the establishment of educational institutions which operate contrary to these principles.

The Constitution<sup>2</sup> further provides for private primary and secondary schools to operate by principles regulated by law in keeping with the standards of state schools. Pursuant to Article 42 the State will further provide scholarships and other means of assistance to enable students of merit lacking financial means to continue their education and will adopt measures of rehabilitation for persons in need of special education.

The only activities to be pursued at educational institutions are training, education, research, and study—activities that “shall not be obstructed in any way.” Finally, article 42 states that “no language other than Turkish shall be taught as mother tongue to Turkish citizens at any institutions of training or education. The foreign languages to be taught in educational institutions and the rules for education in a foreign language will be determined by law and the provisions of international treaties are reserved.”

In another important provision<sup>3</sup> on the right to education the Turkish Constitution also states that “religious and moral education and instruction shall be conducted under state supervision and control. Instruction in religious culture and morals shall be one of the compulsory lessons in the curricula of primary and secondary schools. Other religious education and instruction shall be subject to the individual’s own desire, and in the case of minors, at the request of their legal representatives.”

In accordance with the Basic Law on National Education<sup>4</sup> the fundamental principles of the Turkish national education are as follows:

- 1 – universality and equality
- 2 – individual and social needs
- 3 – orientation
- 4 – right to education
- 5 – equality of opportunity
- 6 – continuity in education
- 7 – Atatürk’s reforms and Principles and Atatürk’s Nationalism
- 8 – education for democracy
- 9 – secularism
- 10 – scientific approach to education
- 11 – planned education
- 12 – coeducation
- 13 – school – parent cooperation
- 14 – education everywhere

1.3. Educational policies

The Ministry of National Education is responsible for fulfilling all education services except for higher education. The Ministry carries out this responsibility through its central, provincial, and international organizations, and its affiliated establishments. According to the Basic Law (No. 1739) on National Education, the Turkish educational system consists of two main parts, namely formal and non-formal education.

Formal education is the regular education conducted within a school for individuals in a certain age group and at the same level, under programs developed in accordance with a certain purpose. It is divided into four levels: Pre-school education, primary education, secondary education, and higher education.

Preschool education is for children younger than 6 years old. Preschool education, which is voluntary, aims at contributing to the physical, mental, and emotional development of the children, to help them acquire good habits, and to prepare them for basic education. Preschool educational institutions include independent kindergartens, nursery classes in primary schools, and preparation classes.

Article 3 of the Law No. 222 on Primary Education provides that “Primary education is provided in primary educational institutions; is compulsory for boys and girls of primary education age, and is free at state schools”. In accordance with this provision, just as in primary educational schools, in secondary educational institutions, all children throughout the country are provided a free education and necessary materials, including pre-school, technical, and vocational education. Law No. 4306 was enacted in 1998 and provided for an increase of the duration of primary education to 8-years, which is compulsory.

Thus all the children were provided with access to compulsory and free primary education.

Secondary education is free of charge and open for all primary school graduates.

Although higher education is available to everyone who has completed their secondary education, only those who pass the university entrance examination are eligible to enroll in a university. Legislation introduced in 2012 increased the number of compulsory years from eight to twelve and this redefined the education system into three levels - primary, as well as lower and upper secondary education, each for duration of 4-years (4+4+4).

Private educational institutions are private schools, courses and training centers which operate under Law No. 5580 on Private Educational Institutions, which was enacted force on February 14, 2007 and replaced Law No. 625. These institutions carry out their activities under the supervision and inspection of the Ministry of National Education.

Private primary and secondary educational institutions are established by Turkish natural citizens and legal persons. Private foreign schools, on the other hand, are opened by foreign nationals and corporate bodies. Private minority schools are opened and operated by non- Muslim minorities. International private schools are opened either solely by individuals and corporate bodies with foreign nationality, jointly through partnerships with Turkish nationals, or by Turkish nationals, or corporate bodies.

Anyone who wishes to attend private educational institutions may do so provided that s/he meets the conditions required by the institution and is able to afford the educational expenses. Those who want to open a private educational institution may do so at every level of education in accordance with the relevant legal arrangements. Establishment of such institutions is subject to Law No. 5580 on Private Educational Institutions. Such institutions may provide education within the framework of the said Law.

As part of recent policies and practices Turkey has three key documents which steer education:

- 1– The Strategic Plan for the Ministry of National Education (2010-14), which sets medium - and long-term education goals;
- 2 – An overall government strategy which includes education, currently established in the Tenth Development Plan (2014-18); and
- 3 – The Lifelong Learning Strategy Paper, which is linked to the European Union's strategy.

According to its strategic documents, by 2023 the Turkish government aims to:

- Achieve a society of educated individuals.
- Launch the Movement of Enhancing Opportunities and Improving Technology project (FATİH), which aims to equip each classroom with an interactive white board and each student with a tablet computer.
- Increase participation rates in pre-school, basic and secondary education to 100%.
- Promote the importance of vocational education.
- Implement reform of the Council of Higher Education (Yüksek Öğretim Kurulu, YÖK).
- Increase the number of private universities.
- Improve the quality of universities.
- Increase the number of academics in universities.
- Implement a policy of language learning.
- Terminate gender and regional disparities and
- Prepare students for higher education and the future by using a more flexible structure.<sup>5</sup>

Radical purges in the education system during the last 5-6 years and the closure of educational institutions in the aftermath of the July 15th coup attempt make most of the above objectives certainly unattainable.

Ever since the beginning of its rule, and particularly since 2011, the AK Party embarked on a systematic effort to permanently Islamize Turkey's education system. During his final term as prime minister, from 2011 to 2015, President Erdogan resolutely pursued his vision of creating his so-called “pious generation”<sup>6</sup>. This objective would be achieved by expanding the state-sponsored religious schools and expanding religious education in the existing secular schools, as well as introducing AKP personnel into schools and throughout educational institutions.

The reforms the AK Party embarked on resulted in 932,000 students attending Imam Hatip schools in the 2014–2015 school years, up from 65,000 at the beginning of the AKP's rule in 2002, a roughly 93.5 percent increase.

President Erdogan's parallel administration -- as well as Tüргеv, the private foundation run by his extended family that is spearheading the expansion of Imam-Hatip schools -- will continue to have a strong informal but direct influence on the education bureaucracy. Ultimately, the Islamic overhaul of the education system is bound to have implications for Turkey's social identity, and on the choices it will make on where it belongs politically.<sup>7</sup>

PART 2

ASSAULT ON EDUCATION IN TURKEY

2.1. Overview of education in Turkey

Prior to proclaiming the founding of the Turkish Republic on October 29, 1923 the most significant educational institutions in the Ottoman Empire were the Sibyan mektepleri,<sup>8</sup> Medreseler<sup>9</sup> and Enderun Mektebi.<sup>10</sup>

Generally, Sibyan mektepleri (elementary schools) were established within a complex of various buildings adjacent to a mosque or attached to a mosque. Initially children were educated about reciting the Holy Koran, religious knowledge and occasionally writing and arithmetic. In these schools, male and female pupils of aged 4 to 5 years old received education until they were 9 to 10 years old. Similarly, Medreseler (Madrassas) were one element of a complex of various buildings/institutions adjacent to a mosque.

The Chancellors, commissioned by a written mandate of the Sultan, were responsible for most decisions made at the Madrasas from selection of, distribution of the allocated resources to the pupils and servants, and general administration of the facilities. Enderun Mektebi were intended to educate children recruited from Christian families.

<sup>10</sup> Palace school and boarding school were mostly for children recruited from Christian families of the Ottoman Empire, for serving in the Ottoman government, in bureaucratic, managerial, and military positions.

Following the founding of the Turkish Republic, on October 29, 1923 the new Constitution<sup>11</sup> (which entered into force in 1924) reiterated compulsory and free primary education for Turkish citizens in state schools. The Law on Unity of Education Tevhid'i Tedrisat Kanunu<sup>12</sup> stipulated the abolishment of the Madrasas. All education institutions came the purview of the Ministry of Education, with the aim of assuring centralized execution of educational affairs.

The Law of November 1, 1928 introduced the new Turkish alphabet (using the Latin alphabet), indicating that the new Turkish language would be easier and more suitable for student to learn, especially in comparison with the old Arabic alphabet. The primary objective of the relevant reforms undertaken by the Government of the Turkish Republic, including the use of the Latin alphabet was to improve the level of literacy and to further develop a communal sense of citizenship.

In this context priority was especially given to rural communities, which at the time comprised almost three quarters of the population. Subject to political debate, "Village Institutes"<sup>13</sup> played a role in providing rural communities with the knowledge and skills necessary for better production and ultimately improved lives in rural areas.

Important changes and developments in the education system were introduced by respective acts starting from the 1960s. The Primary Education Law (No. 222) of 1961 reiterated compulsory and free primary education in state schools and regulated much of the necessary matters for the normal functioning of primary schools.

The adoption of the above law was followed by two very important legal acts in the field of education; The Basic Law of National Education (No. 1739), entered into force in 1973 and regulates the Turkish education system in its entirety, while the Vocational Education Law (No. 3308) entered into force in 1986 and regulates vocational and technical education.

<sup>13</sup> Village Institutes were an educational attempt in Turkey between 1937 and the mid-1940s to transform the Turkish countryside. The main objectives were to modernize social relations, bring an end to poverty and ignorance, and create peasant intellectuals while also increasing agricultural productivity.

In 1997 the duration of compulsory education (primary education) was increased to 8 years. The law<sup>14</sup> introduced various sanctions, ensuring implementation. With the aim of improving the quality of education and increasing participation rates,<sup>15</sup> in 2012 the number of compulsory years was increased from 8 to 12 and this redefined the education system into three levels - primary, and lower and upper secondary education, each for a duration of 4-years (4+4+4).

Structure of Turkey's education system

The Basic Law of National Education of 1973 provides for the Ministry of National Education (MoNE) as the body responsible body for the country's education system, with the directorates and their units responsible for different aspects of education and policy compliance. The highly centralized education system and bureaucratic structure, in particular in the aftermath of the July 15, 2016 coup attempt provides schools with a limited capacity to address their immediate challenges.

Other important bodies in supporting and implementing education policies and strategies are the Provincial and District National Education Directorates across 81 Turkish provinces. The following bodies also play an important role in the Turkish education system:

- The Council of Higher Education (YÖK) is responsible for higher education policies.
- The National Council of Education serves as an advisory body to the Ministry of education and convenes every four years.
- The Board of Education develops curriculums, plans, objectives, and also approves textbooks.
- The Directorate for Strategy Development serves as a consultation unit and coordinates the work of establishing education strategies, policies and goals.

<sup>14</sup> Law No. 4306 of August 18, 1997.

<sup>15</sup> Publicly stated intention. More information on the real intentions behind the move can be found in the Secondary Education chapter.

- The Vocational Education Council decides on planning and development, in coordination with relevant ministries, and organizations representing employees and employers, as well as other key social partners.
- The Assessment, Selection, and Placement Center is responsible for university entrance examinations and placement of teachers, in collaboration with the Ministry of National Education.
- The National Council for Teacher Training is an advisory body coordinating between the Council of Higher Education and the Ministry of National Education.

2.2. Primary education

The Basic Law of National Education<sup>16</sup> No. 1739 (1973) regulates the overall functioning of the Turkish education system, including primary education. According to the Law, the term of primary education is 8-years for children between the ages of 7-14 years old.

In 1983 through an amendment<sup>17</sup> of the law the starting age for compulsory education was set at the age of 6 (six). Thereafter, the length of compulsory education was increased to 8-years in 1997. The provisions of the latter also provided for two stages (elementary and lower secondary education) of primary education.

- General and specific objectives
- Basic principles
- General structure
- Institutions and establishments
- Teaching staff
- School buildings and facilities
- Educational materials and equipment
- Duties and responsibilities in the field of education and training

The major objectives of primary education stipulated in the law are as follows:

- To enable every Turkish child to acquire the basic knowledge, skills, behaviors, and habits necessary to be a good citizen; to educate them in the national moral sense.
- To prepare every Turkish child for upper education by means of developing their interests, abilities, and talents.

According to the 1982 Constitution<sup>18</sup> no individual can be deprived of the right of education. Therefore primary school education is compulsory and free in public schools and primary school institutions are accessible without discrimination on the basis of language, race, gender, philosophical beliefs and/ or religion.<sup>19</sup>

The basic requirement regarding the registration and placement of children for primary education is that they must be of appropriate age. Parents are obliged to register their children for primary education and ensure their attendance to their educational institutions.

According to data from the UNESCO Institute of Statistics, in 2014 Turkey had a total of 14,187,000 students enrolled in primary and secondary educational institutes. 6,430,000 students, or 45 percent of the total number, were receiving their primary education. According to the same data, approximately 5 percent of youth had no formal education and 4 percent of youth have attained an incomplete primary education, meaning that in total approximately 9 percent of 15-24 year-olds in Turkey have not completed primary education.

The list of closed primary and secondary schools after the July 15 coup attempt can be found in Annex 2.

2.3. Preparatory schools

Preparatory schools (known in Turkey as dershane) are private institutions supplementing K-12 education with after-school and weekend programs, in order for students to acquire supplementary knowledge and skills in addition to what they obtain in the regular education system. Preparatory schools emerged in the 1970s to address the test-oriented system of admission to highly competitive high schools and colleges.

According to available statistics, in 2012 over 2 million students attended 3,800 preparatory schools, competing for about 300,000 spaces in 179 public and private colleges and universities.

On average 44 percent of 8th graders and 61 percent of 12th graders attended preparatory schools annually before 2014.

The preparatory schools affiliated with the Hizmet movement were first allegedly targeted during a National Security Council meeting on August 25, 2004. The minutes of the meeting attended by then President Ahmet Necdet Sezer, Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan, Chief of General Staff Hilmi Özkök and Foreign Minister Abdullah Gül reveal that a decision<sup>20</sup> was made to prepare an action plan against the institutions belonging to “Nurculuk Activities and the Fethullah Gulen Group.”

The document was also signed by NSC members Abdüllatif Şener, Cemil Çiçek, Veedi Gönül, Abdulkadir Aksu, Aytaç Yalman, Özden Örnek, İbrahim Fırtına and Şener Eruygur.

The decision also provided for making “legal arrangements which bring heavy sanctions and a preparation of an action plan.”

In implementing the decision it was agreed that “the Gulen group's domestic and international activities should have been followed closely by the Ministry of Interior, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Turkish Intelligence Service and other related institutions, under the coordination of Prime Ministry Implementation Monitoring and Coordination Board (BUTKK). Suspicious and illegal activities at the schools belonging to the group would have been periodically reported to BUTKK.”

Concrete actions and the open assault against the preparatory schools and in broader terms against all educational institutions affiliated with the Gülen/Hizmet movement intensified after the 2013 corruption scandal, which started on December 17, 2013, with the detention of 52 individuals, connected in various ways with the ruling Justice and Development Party (AKP).

Following the scandal then-Prime Minister Erdogan openly called to the public to boycott Hizmet run schools and take their children out of the schools. “Special warnings” were addressed to members of the parliament from ruling AKP, along with serious consequences in case of non-compliance.

December 17, 2013 was also used as a justification for later persecuting those who did not remove their children from the schools. In mid-August 2016 Sakarya Governor confirmed that public officials who continued sending their children to Hizmet affiliated schools after December 17-25 were dismissed.

In addition to the above measures on many occasions after the 2013 corruption scandal Erdogan clearly stated his further intentions in relation to the Hizmet affiliated schools; literally by “scraping the roots of all of them.” According his own words, he planned on “creating an intelligence state” by changing the law of the National Intelligence Organization (MİT),<sup>21</sup> and threatening to “settle accounts with them”<sup>22</sup> after March 30, 2014,” by “conducting operations and raiding their places.”<sup>23</sup>

Undoubtedly the issue was both political and personal. On May 11, 2014, during the 22nd Consultation and Evaluation Meeting of the AKP party. Erdogan openly admitted that.

“If it is a witch hunt to take those who have betrayed this country, ... yes we will have this witch hunt ... as long as I have breath I will never forget and forgive those attacks.”<sup>24</sup> Whoever is negligent in this challenge is unfair. In this struggle whoever steps back, intends to compromise, forgets the past - would betray the nation's trust.”

Law on exclusion of private training centers from the scope of “Private Teaching Institutions” (No. E.2014/88, K.2015/68)

On November 14, 2013 the now-closed Zaman newspaper was the first to report on a draft-law (then allegedly authored but denied by the Ministry of Education), though they denied this - stipulating the closure/conversion of all preparatory schools and learning centers by the end of the 2013-2014 school year.<sup>25</sup>

The government initially denied the existence of the draft-law, reportedly to avoid discussion, and public outrage. Subsequently, the Ministry of Education confirmed “there had been some discussion about preparatory schools”, downplaying the plan and stating that nothing has been finalized. The Government also claimed that the newspaper misrepresented the initiative.

Media outlets indeed went further, publishing additional documents and interviews, which revealed the clear position and intention of the government to close the schools. Subsequently, after extensively being reported through news outlets, a large social media campaign was launched by instructors working in preparatory schools, as well as activists and the public at large.

<sup>25</sup> The February 28, 2014 law set September 1, 2015 as the deadline to close down the network of preparatory schools.

ÖZ-DE-Bİ, GÜVEN-DER, TÖDER and ÖZDER, umbrella organizations representing around 3,000 preparatory schools at the national level coordinated together in the hopes of overturning the government's decision to close the schools. Other stakeholders, including educators, business groups, civil society organizations, economists, legal experts, academics, intellectuals, and many concerned parents - all gradually came to the support the preparatory schools against the proposed plan. Almost all opposition political parties criticized the government's action on a socially sensitive matter.

Hundreds of meetings called by governors and other government officials with representatives from thousands of preparatory schools turned out to be irrelevant and had no impact. Then-Prime Minister Erdogan did not reply to the request by umbrella organizations to meet and discuss the situation.

Faced with increasingly opposition to his government's plan even from his own Education Ministers,<sup>26</sup> Erdogan backed down from the government's initial position and decided to extend the deadline for closing the schools.

He also took up the issue himself to defend plans to close the schools, by claiming the following:

- Preparatory schools have created their own educational space that works against traditional schools.
- Students deprive themselves of extracurricular activities by attending middle and high schools on weekdays and preparatory schools on weekends.
- Preparatory schools exploit the weaknesses of traditional schools and turn them into their profit.
- Preparatory schools turn students into “test machines” rather than truly educating them.

<sup>26</sup> Three (3) education ministers were dismissed during the process, allegedly on disagreements over the initiative to shut down preparatory schools.

Pro-government circles and news outlets joined the government's narrative, launching an active campaign against preparatory schools and blaming, in particular, the Zaman newspaper and the Hizmet movement – which through its affiliated companies and foundations was allegedly running a quarter of all preparatory schools and learning centers operating in Turkey.

Ahead of parliament's action, educational and legal experts argued the following:

- 1 – The proposed bill would lay off at least 100,000 instructors and support personnel working at preparatory schools; at this time, there were at least 250,000 teachers were awaiting appointment.
- 2 – After a thorough evaluation of the situation it was determined that only 263 or 6.6% of all preparatory centers out of a total of 3,961 centers could be successfully converted into private schools.
- 3 – Converting preparatory schools to other private schools requires very high investment costs.
- 4 – The proposed act was unconstitutional, since it contravened several provisions of the Turkish Constitution. The proposed plan was also contrary to the case law of the European Court of Human Rights.
- 5 – Preparatory schools were meeting equal opportunity gaps in higher education by preparing students from poor families that could not afford private universities, especially from the Turkey's predominantly Kurdish Southeast.
- 6 – Preparatory schools facilitated higher rates of acceptance into higher educational institutions, which in turn contributed to fewer number of youth joining the PKK<sup>27</sup> in the Southeast.

Kurdistan Workers' Party.

On February 28, 2014, however the Turkish Parliament passed a bill closing down thousands of private schools, many of which were allegedly run by the Hizmet movement. The bill, which was approved late on February 28, set September 1, 2015 as the deadline for closing down the network of preparatory schools. The bill was confirmed by the former President Abdullah Gül on March 12, 2014. In addition to adopting the law, the government resorted to immense pressure on parents and also openly threatened them to withdraw their children from preparatory schools.

The justification from the Government for adopting the bill was that it wanted to abolish what it called an “unfair education system.” The clear objective however, was to shut down what was widely perceived to be a “major source of revenue for the Hizmet movement.” Another major intention of the bill was to remove the influence of the Hizmet movement from the education system by dismissing principals, assistant principals, and other school officials, while simultaneously increasing AKP influence in the education system through the appointment of pro-AKP personnel.

An appeal to overturn the law was filed with the Constitutional Court in Ankara by the main opposition Republican People’s Party only eight (8) days<sup>28</sup> after it was published in the Official Gazette. This appeal argued that the law violated the Constitution by depriving people of education and training.

The petition submitted to the Constitutional Court alleged that “the contested provisions had not been introduced due to a pressing social need and that abolishment of the private tutoring centers which encompass the right to education and learning, the freedom of enterprise and, the right to labor was disproportionate...

“It alleged that provisions” infringed upon the very essence of these rights. It was also maintained that the right to private enterprise was totally inhibited through the prohibition of private training whereas the State was obliged to strike a fair balance between the public interest expected from the restriction and individual rights and freedoms. It was therefore alleged that these provisions<sup>29</sup> were contrary to Articles 2, 5, 13, 17, 35, 42, 48 and 49 of the Constitution.”<sup>30</sup>

On July 14, 2015 Turkey's constitutional court overturned<sup>31</sup> the law closing down the preparatory schools, arguing in its judgment that “without introducing an arrangement of the specified nature and putting forward a compelling reason in respect of the order of a democratic society and without resorting to less restrictive means which shall accomplish the purpose of restriction as well, closure of private training centers with a completely prohibitive method was a restriction on the freedom of enterprise, which was disproportionate and not necessary in the order of a democratic society.”<sup>32</sup>

Faced with the Constitutional Court decision to cancel the controversial law, the government however did not cease its efforts to close the schools at all costs. Police raids, as well as inspections and auditor controls on Hizmet run preparatory schools were reported immediately after the decision was announced. Ordered by local Governor Offices to scare away students, parents, and teachers, these illegal raids sometimes included as many as eight central government agencies, including the Finance Ministry, the Social Security Institution (SGK), the Ministry of Environment and Urban Planning and the Ministry of Agriculture.<sup>33</sup>

In the beginning of August 2015 the Ministry of Education adopted a new regulation in an attempt to bypass the Constitutional Court's ruling. On August 7, 2015 the Education Minister Nabi Avcı explained that current preparatory schools could continue to operate as private educational courses if they met the requirements stipulated by the regulation and that those schools must obtain a new license from the ministry in order to operate. The regulation was clearly an attempt by the government to impose a ban on educational institutions regarded as not pro-government.

Educators and various education unions applied to the Council of State on August 13, 2015 to overturn the new regulation. On September 18, 2015 the Council of State<sup>34</sup> declared invalid the Ministry of Education's address to every governor's office, which demanded all operating university preparation schools known as "dershane" be closed. The same day (September 18, 2015) the Ministry of Education issued another address canceling the August 12 order to provincial governors.

Decisions by the highest courts (Constitutional Court and the Council of State) did little to deter the government from its intention to close the preparatory schools.

Non-implementation of the court rulings is a powerful testimony on the state of rule of law in Turkey, even before the coup attempt. Openly and unlawfully defying the authority of these courts, many governors across the country officially notified preparatory schools operating in their territories to "immediately cease operations and close forever."

Eventually, the combination of open and hidden threats addressed to parents and teachers, illegal acts targeting preparatory schools, the cancellation of business licenses, the illegal shuttering of preparatory schools and other unlawful actions by the government caused registration rates to drop dramatically, even if the schools were in practice still "operating."

Finally, (Article 2. b) of Decree Law No. KHK/667<sup>35</sup> of July 23, 2016, concerning the measures taken in the scope of the post-coup attempt state of emergency provided for disbanding all "private educational institutions and organizations as well as private student dormitories and hostels" attached, affiliated or connected with what the government has unlawfully labelled as "pro-Fetullah [Gülenist] Terrorist Organization (FET Ö/PD)." <sup>36</sup>

<sup>34</sup> The Turkish Council of State (In Turkish - Danıştay) is the highest administrative court in the Republic of Turkey. The Court is located in Ankara and its role and tasks are prescribed in Article 155 of the Turkish Constitution.

According to the Decree Law 667 - “health practice and research centers of the disbanded foundation higher education institutions, and the movables and all forms of assets, receivables and rights, documents and papers belonging to all other disbanded institutions and organizations shall be deemed to have been transferred to the Treasury against no cost; immovable properties belonging to the aforementioned shall be registered to the Treasury at the land registry office, in a fashion free from all forms of restrictions and immovable liabilities. Students enrolled to the disbanded higher education institutions shall be placed by the Higher Education Council (YÖK) in public or foundation universities.

Until they graduate, these students shall continue making the due payments that they need to pay to those foundation higher education institutions to the relevant university.

YÖK shall be mandated and authorized to set out the procedures and principles governing the implementation of this paragraph; to steer implementation thereof; to take all forms of measures and to remove all hesitations that may emerge in connection with the implementation of this paragraph.”

A decision by Turkey’s Constitutional Court in January 2017 ruled that government decrees, including those issued during a state of emergency targeting or seizing individual’s assets are unconstitutional.<sup>37</sup> According to the Constitutional Court, no government decrees on property rights can be issued, without a trial that requires a verdict.

2.4. Secondary education

Secondary education comprises educational institutions (called Lise) where pupils enroll after graduating from primary school. Secondary education lasts for a minimum of four years. These institutions (high schools) fall into two major groups - namely high schools for “general education” and high schools for “vocational and technical education.”

General education high schools prepare students for higher education, while vocational and technical high schools prepare students for higher education and for learning a profession; they, prepare them for life and business. All students graduating from primary schools are entitled to enroll to secondary schools.

The Basic Law of National Education<sup>38</sup> No. 1739 was enacted in 1973 and provides for graduates from vocational and technical institutions to be admitted to higher education institutions, granting them the right to transition to higher education.

Until the 2004-2005 academic years the duration of education in secondary institutions was 3 years, in 2005 the duration was increased to 4 years. Until 1997 mandatory education comprised only 5 years and from 1997-2012 8 years. Legislation introduced in 2012 increased the number of compulsory years from 8 to 12, and this redefined the education system into three levels - primary, lower and upper secondary education, each for a duration of 4 years (4+4+4).

A foreigner might look at this model as an extension of mandatory schooling, and might find it something to be applauded. For many Turkish citizens, however, the extension was seen as a secondary aspect of 4+4+4; rather, the 4+4+4 plan was code for the re-opening of İmam-Hatip middle schools zealously supported by President Erdogan. An analysis of İmam-Hatip schools<sup>39</sup> is below.

Rise of İmam-Hatip Schools

An İmam-Hatip school is a secondary religious educational institution originally founded in lieu of a vocational school. They were originally intended to train government employed imams, and were founded; after madrasas were abolished by the Unification of Education Act<sup>40</sup> (1924), as a part of “Ataturk's reforms.”

In 1933, the Faculty of Theology was abolished and İmam-Hatip schools were discontinued, only to be reinstated in 1951, through the establishment of seven special secondary schools.<sup>41</sup> Since then, the schools have several times faced the threat of closure until the 1980s when their graduates gained the right of entry to all university departments.

Since their reinstatement in 1951 İmam-Hatip schools have been controversial in the debate about Turkey's secular state, as they served as a tool to further a political Islam agenda and raise an “Islamic generation.”

The introduction of 8 years of compulsory education in 1997 resulted in a sudden decline in the popularity of İmam-Hatip schools, since children could not enter vocational schools (one of them being İmam-Hatip Schools)<sup>42</sup> until the ninth grade, rather than the sixth grade as before. When the Justice and Development Party (AKP) came to power in 2002, only about 2.60 percent of eligible children attended religious-based schools.<sup>43</sup>

Since the AKP was elected in November 2002, that trend has been reversed, in part thanks to several administrative decisions and other actions resulting in a four-fold annual increase of students attending Imam-Hatip schools during the first nine years of AKP rule.<sup>44</sup> Other government actions since 2011 (summarized below) resulted in close to one million students enrolling in Imam-Hatip schools during the 2014-2015 school year.<sup>45</sup> The number of Imam-Hatip schools also surged; there are now 1,597 middle and 1,017 high schools respectively.<sup>46</sup>

In the academic year 2010–2011 the Ministry of National Education decided to close the so-called general schools, which were deemed educationally inadequate. Between the 2010–2011 and 2013–2014 school years, all 1,477 general high schools were phased out and converted into other types of schools. Many, perhaps most of them became Imam-Hatip schools, but the exact number of general schools converted into Imam-Hatip schools is unclear.<sup>47</sup>

Another reason for the surge was that many other secular and vocational schools were simply converted into Imam-Hatip schools based on the discretion of Ministry of National Education (MoNE) officials. Again, there are no available statistics to show precisely how many schools were converted.

In 2011 the government decided to accord Imam-Hatip graduates equal standing to that of secular graduates in college applications, making them more attractive option for college-bound students.

In the 2013–2014 school year a national exam was introduced to be taken during eighth grade, the final year of middle school. The exam was allegedly introduced with the intention of students into a category of high school: standard academic; specialized academic; or vocational.<sup>48</sup> Along with the exam, students were asked to list their top 15 school preferences, with the understanding that they would only be assigned to a school for which their test scores and grades qualified them.

This gave the government the possibility to arbitrarily assign students to İmam-Hatip schools. Among other widely cited examples of the arbitrariness of the assignments among the Turkish population at large, the grandson of the chief rabbi of Turkey also was assigned to an İmam-Hatip school, along with many Christians. Although there is no data on how many students were arbitrarily assigned to İmam-Hatip schools one member of the parliament from the Republican People's Party (CHP) put the number at around 40,000 students.

İmam-Hatip schools provide free transportation and meals potentially making them attractive to the public. Officials often claim the schools “have the same education with a few extra religious classes.”

In the aftermath of the July 15 coup attempt many of the closed Hizmet movement schools and dormitories were converted into İmam-Hatip schools.<sup>49</sup>

All of the above factors contributed to a massive increase in the number of İmam-Hatip schools and students. In the 2014–2015 school year, around 932,000 students attended İmam-Hatip schools, a roughly 40 percent increase from the previous school year. Despite the extensive support by the government their overall performance has remained extremely poor. On a test of 40 math questions in 2015, students at İmam-Hatip schools averaged only 2.18 correct answers. In comparison, students of FEN Lisesi<sup>50</sup> averaged 28.42 correct answers on the same test.

<sup>49</sup> In absence of official statistics it is difficult to gather accurate information on the number of arbitrary converted schools. On September 12, 2016 the head of the social democratic Education and Science Functionaries Trade Union informed that the closed Gülen inspired schools were “being converted to İmam-Hatip schools.” See - <http://www.al-monitor.com/pulse/originals/2016/09/turkey-kurds-become-new-target-of-post-coup-purges.html#ixzz4SfRKtECv>

İmam-Hatip schools and the rise of domestic radicalization

The wider significance of İmam-Hatip schools has been a constant source of contention, with many viewing them as “problem ridden institutions”<sup>51</sup> which are breeding grounds for radicals.

The attempted coup of July 15, 2016 unquestionably changed the entire social and political context in the country. The state of emergency enabled the government to consolidate power and continue unabated its efforts to eliminate the Gülen movement. This will have a long-lasting negative effect on the future of the country.

One of the major aspects of its fight against the movement was the unlawful and arbitrary seizing of land and buildings belonging to those owned by people inspired by the Gülen movement. This was not a new practice. Since the end of 2013, first as Prime Minister and later in his capacity as President, Erdogan had on several occasions called on officials in AKP run municipalities to seize “by any means necessary,” land and buildings belonging to individuals inspired by the Gülen movement.

In the aftermath of the attempted coup the confiscated land and thousands of buildings belonging to the Gülen inspired schools, dormitories and hospitals were considered as “war spoils” and shared among pro-government individuals and companies. Equally worrisome, many of the facilities were transformed into religious education facilities (İmam-Hatip schools), with the ongoing State of Emergency contributing to the further radicalization of Turkish society.

<sup>51</sup> Aksit, B. (1986) “İmam-Hatip and Other Secondary Schools in the Context of Political and Cultural Modernization of Turkey,” Journal of Human Sciences, V/I, pp. 25-41.

In the beginning of August 2016 Van Serhat High School, a private school affiliated with the Gülen movement in the eastern province of Van was turned into a religious vocational “İmam-Hatip” high school. Video footage released on social media shows officials from the Van Governor’s Office carrying a banner of the religious vocational school that reads “15 Temmuz Şehitleri İmam-Hatip Ortaokulu,”<sup>52</sup> in dedication to the civilians killed while trying to avert the failed coup attempt on the night of July 15.

Efforts to eradicate the Gülen movement, a renowned international movement combating extremism and radicalization by promoting secular education with a specific emphasis on peace building, will contribute to the rise of radicalization. Such efforts will inevitably have their own cost and long-term negative social and political repercussions in Turkey, the volatile Middle East, and beyond.

One of the major effects of this change in the government’s education policy has been the damage already inflicted to the traditional mainstream understanding of Islam across Turkish society. Turkish citizens have always been antagonistic to any form of extremism; this is in part due to the efforts of educational institutions, such as Gülen inspired schools.

The current rise in homegrown radicalization is another sign that Turkey’s social fabric is undergoing a harmful change. This is unfortunately; reflected in the number of terrorist attacks and victims killed by terrorism. There were no terrorist attacks in 2014 - 4 attacks (149 victims) in 2015 and already 12 attacks (317 victims) from January to mid-December in 2016.

Apart from serious concerns on the quality of education in İmam-Hatip schools, given the importance of Turkey and its unique geo-strategic position, the deepening radicalization of Turkish society poses a serious threat to Turkey's democracy and security and also to the security of other NATO member states.

Below is a list of several Gülen inspired schools converted to İmam-Hatip schools<sup>53</sup>

- On August 20, 2016 a private school affiliated with the Gülen movement in the southern province of Kahramanmaraş was turned into a religious vocational school. Turkish authorities affiliated with the Kahramanmaraş Governor’s Office hanged a banner on the building reading; “During the 2016-2017 school year, an İmam-Hatip secondary school will be operating in this building.” The school was named “15 Temmuz Şehitleri İmam-Hatip Ortaokulu,”<sup>54</sup> in dedication to the civilians killed while trying to stop the failed coup attempt on the night of July 15.
- Fatih College in the western province of İzmir was turned into an İmam-Hatip school in the beginning of September 2016.
- On September 9 a private school affiliated with the Gülen movement in Bursa province was turned into a religious vocational İmam-Hatip school – and members of the staff placed a verse from the Holy Quran at the entrance that read,: “Truth has come, and falsehood has departed.”
- In September 2016 a private dormitory in Sakarya that was confiscated by the government as part of an investigation into the Gülen movement was turned into a religious İmam-Hatip vocational school. The dormitory officially became an İmam-Hatip middle school during a ceremony attended by Akyazı Mayor Hasan Akcan and District Director of Education Recep Özdemir.
- In September 2016 a private school affiliated with the Gülen movement in the southeastern province of Adıyaman was turned into a religious İmam-Hatip vocational school. Officials from the Adıyaman Governor’s Office hung a banner on the building reading. “During the 2016-2017 school year, an İmam-Hatip secondary school will be operating in this building.” The school was renamed Şehit Necati Sayın Anadolu İmam-Hatip Lisesi<sup>55</sup> in honor of a civilian killed while trying to stop the coup attempt on the night of July 15th.

2.5. Teachers and school personnel

Teachers in Turkey enjoy the same legal and employee rights and are treated in the same category with all other civil servants subject to the Law No. 657 on civil servants.<sup>57</sup>

Issues related to inadequate funding, the inability to upgrade the quality of education, irrational and political interventions to the curricula and the continuous introduction of extreme elements continue to be major threats to children's right to education – factors which are clearly also increasing social tension.

None of the above represents a bigger threat to education than the constant oppression teachers and education staff constantly face. Turkish labor law divides laborers into “workers” and “public officers” with both facing very limited rights to association, collective bargaining or striking.

The education system has been under intense pressure with the problems beginning even before the AK Party came into power. Since the adoption of the 1970 labor law, Turkish governments have constantly taken aim at teachers' unions. Education trade unions, and their members and teachers have long represented a soft target of arbitrary repression and have been constantly harassed, including through false accusations, arrests and ill- treatment.

The militant TÖB-DEK teachers solidarity association was dissolved after the 1980 coup, and a number of its members were tortured and killed.

The teacher's union, Eğitim-Sen, part of the Confederation of Public Employees' Trade Unions (KESK) has long been targeted by state repression. The Union was established in 1995 and with an estimated number of 200,000 members is one of Turkey's largest unions. In 2004, the AKP government attempted to ban the union and even though the European Court of Human Rights ruled in favor of Eğitim-Sen in 2009 and again in 2012, the same year 25 leading members of the union were sentenced to prison terms of over six years on "terrorism" charges.

While the presumed link between Turkey's trade unions and any real or perceived terrorist organization has yet to be established - the authorities have repeatedly used every possible opportunity to refer to such an alleged link as an excuse for harsh treatment, and arbitrary detention and imprisonment.

AKTİF EĞİTİM-SEN, the Educators Union perceived to be closest to the Hizmet movement was shut down across the country following the coup attempt. Its members were suspended and many were detained and arrested.

Many have been reported to have been subject to torture and ill- treatment.

A.H., President of the AKTİF EĞİTİM-SEN Educators Union in Afyon was taken into custody for his alleged links to the Gülen movement. A.H. was reportedly beaten so heavily he was not be able walk for some time. He appeared before the prosecutor to give his testimony 10 days later, after he recovered from his injuries.<sup>59</sup>

Aftermath of the July 15th coup attempt

In accordance with the UNESCO Recommendations Concerning the Status of Teachers<sup>60</sup>, “all aspects of the preparation and employment of teachers should be free from any form of discrimination on grounds of race, color, sex, religion, political opinion, national or social origin, or economic condition.”<sup>61</sup> In addition, “teachers should be adequately protected against arbitrary action affecting their professional standing or career.”<sup>62</sup>

The existing problems in the education system reached new and unprecedented dimensions following July 15th when tens of thousands of teachers were either dismissed, had their teaching licenses revoked or even detained. Thousands of educational institutions were shut down under the state of emergency declared after the coup attempt.

The July 15 coup attempt exacerbated the already dire situation of trade unionists and other employees in the education system, taking a heavy toll on teachers around Turkey. The Turkish education system has never faced such an extensive crackdown, not even during past coup eras, including the aftermath of the September 12th, 1980 coup d'état.<sup>63</sup>

<sup>63</sup> The September 12, 1980 Turkish coup d'état – (in Turkish: 12 Eylül Darbesi), headed by the Chief of the General Staff, General Kenan Evren was the third coup d'état in the history of the Republic.

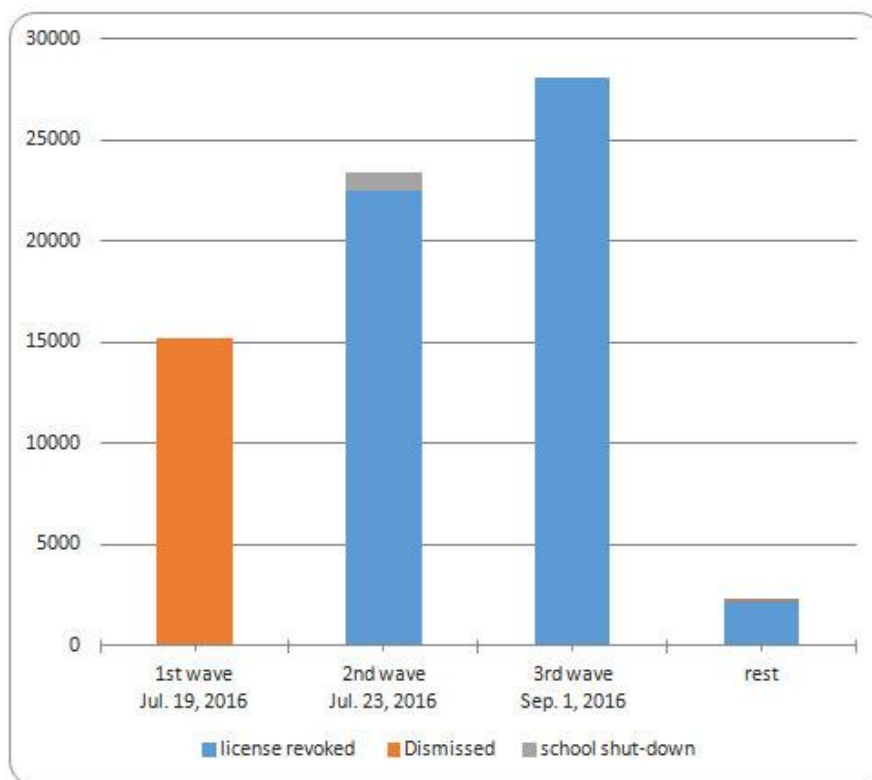

In a series of State of Emergency Decrees<sup>64</sup> issues from July 23 until November 2016 the government dismissed and/or revoked teaching licenses for approximately 41,667 teachers.

Teachers and other administrative personnel were unlawfully dismissed from their positions, based solely on political and administrative decisions. Along with their careers and their right to work, these actions increasingly created unnecessarily precarious economic circumstances for hundreds of thousands of families – as well as endangering the future of approximately 1.5 million students. The future of education in Turkey has been impacted irreversibly and in the most negative manner.

The teaching licenses and passports of thousands of teachers were revoked with the stroke of a pen and without any justification.

The first wave in a series of unlawful actions came on July 19, 2016 through a notice by Turkey's National Education Ministry, which dismissed 15,200 teachers and other personnel. The second wave materialized on July 23, 2016 through Decree-Law 667, which revoked the teaching licenses of 22,474 teachers and closed 947 private schools (pre-schools, primary

The third wave of dismissals was carried out pursuant to Decree-Law 672 of September 1, 2016, revoking the teaching licenses of 28,080 teachers. On September 19, the first day of the school year, a deputy prime minister announced that in the last two months the government had fired 27,715 teachers and another 9,465 remained suspended.

Diagram #1: 3 Unlawful Waves of Actions by the Turkish Ministry of National Education: Academics detained, Licenses revoked, Universities shut-down

On September 8, 2016, dismissals occurred largely in Southeastern Turkey, where a large part of the population is ethnic Kurds. On October 29, 2016 the dismissals continued pursuant to Decree-law 675 with 2,239 teachers losing their teaching licenses.

And finally, 119 teachers were dismissed from the Ministry of National Education based on Decree- Law 677 of November 22, 2016

Dismissals unfortunately do not just mean merely losing the teaching position within an educational institution, but rather losing any opportunity of working as a teacher in any educational institution, private or public, throughout Turkey. Dismissed teachers and other personnel along with their family members have also been deprived of their health insurance, social aid, and other benefits.

Deprived of any possibility of using their skills to financially sustain themselves and their families, dismissed teachers face extremely difficult psychological, financial, and social circumstances.

A housewife with two disabled children from Uşak's Ulubey district whose husband was arrested as part of an investigation into the Gülen movement hurt her lower back and leg while she was dealing with her children's physical needs. Due to the accident she was no longer able to look after them and applied for assistance from the Social Assistance and Solidarity Foundation. She was denied support by the foundation who told me that they would not help families who are tried on terrorism charges.<sup>65</sup>

Ergülü Yıldız, 57-year-old teacher and deputy principal at a middle school in the Sungurlu district was found hanged in his home in the central province of Çorum (In the central Black Sea region) on November 24, 2016, which is Teachers Day in Turkey. Prior to that Mr. Yıldız was dismissed from his job along with thousands of other teachers and also detained briefly over alleged links to the Gülen movement. Police found his body hanging from the ceiling of his house and took it to Sungurlu State Hospital for an autopsy.<sup>66</sup>

In addition to the severe economic burden from being permanently dismissed from the profession, teachers also face immense social pressure and stigma. In order to economically support their families teachers are now obliged to take any possible jobs, included those they are not qualified for, such as physical jobs in construction sites, bazaars, etc. Lack of proper qualification for positions has already contributed to frightful work place accidents.

A teacher of religious culture and moral knowledge at a college in Istanbul's Merter neighborhood was among tens of thousands of teachers who had earlier been dismissed from their jobs under the government's post-coup emergency rule. He reportedly moved to the Black Sea province of Samsun and was able to find a job at a construction site where he fell from the seventh floor of the building in late September 2016. Sustaining multiple fractures he woke up from a months-long coma on November 7, 2016.<sup>67</sup>

Thousands of teachers, in particular teachers working in private educational institutions affiliated with the Gulen movement have been subject to unlawful detention and imprisonment. They've been detained with abundant and serious accusations, but no evidence.

Serious allegations of ill-treatment and torture have emerged, including severe beatings, rape, verbal and psychological abuse, as well as denial of food, water and medical treatment. Visible signs of ill-treatment and torture have been evident in several cases officially ruled as "suicides".

Gokhan Acikkolu, a high school history teacher was detained on July 23, 2016, presumably for being a follower of Fethullah Gülen. According to press reports Mr. Acikkolu was hospitalized on July 28, 2016. He was suffering from diabetes and harsh treatment, but was later returned to the Istanbul police's anti-terrorism department, where he died on August 5, 2016. His father rejected any links to the coup attempt and claimed that his son was denied access to his medicine the last 6 days of his life.

Mr. Accikolu never appeared before a judge to face any charges, but he was nevertheless denied a funeral service because he was labelled “a traitor.” The Journalists and Writers Foundation noted that Istanbul chief prosecutor's office launched a probe into the death of Mr. Acikkolu; however no results have been brought to light since the announcement of the investigation.<sup>68</sup>

Reports indicate that children of those detained or purged also face constant discrimination, stigmatization, and bullying from their peers and sometimes even from teachers.

B.N.M., a high school student committed suicide on October 24, 2016 by jumping to her death from the walls of the Boyabat fortress (located in Northern Turkey). According to media reports, B.N.M. committed suicide after being reportedly bullied by classmates and lecturers over her father's alleged links to the Gulen movement. Her father (S.M.) was dismissed from his position at Boyabat Şehit Ersoy Gürsu High School on September 1, 2016.

2.6. Higher education

Higher education institutions defined as those offering at least two-year programs after secondary education include universities, institutes of higher technology, post-secondary vocational schools, and other higher educational institutions (such as police and military schools and academies). Higher educational institutions and academic institutions can be one of the following.<sup>69</sup>

Faculty (College): An institution offering higher education courses, where students perform scholarly research. It has various departments and programs. The program is at least 4 years duration, culminating in Bachelor's degree.

- Graduate School: An institution at universities concerned with graduate education, scholarly research and applications. Graduate Schools award MA, MSc or PhD degrees.
- Post-secondary School: An Institution of higher education mainly concerned with providing instruction for a specific profession. It lasts for 8 semesters.
- Conservatory: Institution of higher education in which artists are trained for music and the performing arts. It last for 8 semesters.
- Post-secondary Vocational School: Institution of higher education that is aimed at training students for specific professions and provides instruction lasting four semesters.
- Research and Application Center: An institution of higher education carrying out research and applied studies to meet the applied study needs of various areas and to provide preparatory and support activities for various professional areas, with the aim of supporting education in institutions of higher education.

The number of universities has dramatically increased during the last decade, with around 100 new universities established since 2006. As of September 2014, there were 176 accredited universities (104 state universities and 72 non-profit foundation universities), 8 independent post secondary vocational schools not attached to any university and 6 other higher education institutes.<sup>70</sup> In 2014, the total number of students in institutes of higher education was 5.449.961, with only 360.670 attending private universities and 5.089.291 attending state universities.<sup>71</sup> Due to limited spaces in state universities private universities emerged as a necessity, and the preparatory schools contributed to meeting these needs.

After several military coups in the second half of the 20th century, and particularly after the 1980 coup, many intellectuals, and academics left the country. After initially meaningful reforms by the Justice and Development Party (AKP) following 2002 more than doubled the number of universities, a significant number of these academic exiles, including foreign-educated academics were inspired to return.

Higher education institutions can award the following degrees:

- An Associate's degree (short cycle) is awarded after completing a two-year study program offered by the post-secondary vocational schools attached to universities and independent post-secondary vocational schools.
- The Bachelor's degree (1st cycle) is normally awarded after the completion of a four-year course of study. The duration of study for dentistry and veterinary medicine programs is five years, and that of medicine is six years. Qualifications in these three latter fields are considered to be the equivalent of a Master's degree.
- A Master's degree program (2nd cycle) is a two-year program leading to the Master of Arts (MA) or Master of Sciences (Msc), which require, in several cases, the submission of a thesis.
- A Doctoral degree program (3rd cycle) is usually an eight-semester program following a Master's diploma leading to a PhD degree.
- Proficiency in Art is at least a six-semester post-Master's program in the visual and performing art branches, making it equivalent to a Doctorate. It requires the presentation of an original work of art or (in music and the performing arts) a superior, creative performance.

Legal framework and the Council of Higher Education (YÖK)

The functioning of the Turkish higher education system is regulated by the following legal acts:

- Law No. 1739 (1973) on National Education
- Law No. 2547 (1981) on Higher Education Institutions
- Law No. 2547 (1984) on the foundation of universities in Higher Education
- Law No. 4306 (1997) on National Education
- Law No. 4702 (2001) on access to the 2-year higher education programs without university entrance examination for vocational/technical high school graduates
- Law No. 5580 (2007) on Private Education Institutions

The 1981 Law on Higher Education comprehensively restructured the higher education sector in the Republic of Turkey, by designating all higher education institutions as universities. In accordance with the Higher Education Law (No. 2547), the system became centralized, with all higher education institutions tied to the Council of Higher Education (YÖK), including all private universities.

The Council of Higher Education established by the law was entrusted with guiding important activities of higher education institutions including planning, organization, governance, instruction and research. In addition a central university exam and placement, as well as student contribution fees were introduced in public universities. In parallel provisions were made for non-profit foundations to establish higher education institutions - which began in 1984.

The Council of Higher Education is according to the law an autonomous institution, responsible for the planning, coordination and governance of the higher education system in Turkey, in accordance with the Turkish Constitution and the Higher Education Laws. Universities decide upon their own academic calendars; however, The academic year generally starts in September and ends in June.

According to Higher Education Law No. 2547 students are admitted to institutions of higher education through an examination prepared in accordance with provisions specified by the Council of Higher Education.

In the evaluation of examination results, the performance of students during their secondary education is taken into account, while quotas are allocated for the placement of top-ranking graduates of secondary schools. Students demonstrating outstanding talent in certain branches of the arts may be admitted to undergraduate programs in those same branches on the basis of selection procedures to be determined by the Council of Higher Education.

Higher education in the aftermath of the attempted coup

In the late hours of July 15, 2016, a small faction of the Turkish Armed Forces (TSK) who called themselves the “Peace at Home Council” attempted to overthrow the Government of President Recep Tayyip Erdogan by seizing control of several key places in Ankara, Istanbul and other locations. The so-called “Peace at Home Council” cited an alleged erosion of secularism, the elimination of democratic rule, a disregard for human rights, and Turkey's loss of credibility in the international arena as reasons for staging the coup.<sup>72</sup>

As crowds of people took to the streets dozens of pro-coup soldiers abandoned their tanks and other military vehicles. Forces loyal to the government were able to defeat the coup plotters and the attempted coup was thwarted within approximately 12 hours. According to official sources at least 248 people were killed and more 2,193 were injured during the attempt.<sup>73</sup>

Overnight, educators across the country became a suspected class and the crackdown on higher education was swift and is still expanding. Immediately after the coup attempt the Council of Higher Education (YÖK) suspended 4,225 academics and forced all 1,577 university deans to resign – staging a direct assault on the institutional autonomy of Turkey's universities.

The government also imposed a travel ban on academics - reportedly “a temporary measure as accomplices of the coup plotters in universities were a potential flight risk.” Those who were abroad at the time of the attempted coup were ordered to return, sometimes facing investigations, detention or arrest once in Turkey. The Council of Higher Education (YÖK) further ordered each university to compile lists of faculty staff suspected of links to the Hizmet movement.

Particularly over the past three years, Turkish authorities have moved to retaliate against academics for expressing their political views - some merely for signing the “Academics for Peace”<sup>74</sup> petition criticizing human rights violations. Attacks against petition signatories included the suspensions and terminations of academics from positions at universities, the detention and interrogation of faculty members by prosecutors, and threats and attacks against signatories. By spring 2016 many of those not yet detained fled abroad, with an estimated one hundred (100) to hundred fifty (150) signatories finding refuge in Germany alone.<sup>75</sup>

In March 2016 President Erdogan also proposed redefining Turkish anti-terrorism laws to include the activities of academics, journalists and NGO advocates, a move that threatened to permanently criminalize freedom of expression, freedom of association and academic freedom for literally anyone critical of the government.

<sup>74</sup> The petition was made public at an Istanbul news conference on January 11, 2016 and was initially signed by 1,128 academics (followed by more than 1,000 other academics). The petition, which declared that -“ We will not be party to this crime,” condemned the government's security operations against PKK youth movement in cities of southeast Turkey because of the disastrous impact on the Kurdish civilian population. The petition also called for a resumption of peace talks with the PKK.

On May 2, 2016, former rector of the Kahramanmaraş-based Sutcu İmam University, Professor Fatih Mehmet Karaaslan and 22 academics teaching at the same university were among those detained in police raids carried out in Kahramanmaraş, Şanlıurfa and Gaziantep. The chairman of the Kahramanmaraş-based Lale Education and Cultural Association was also detained during the operations.

It is mainly by considering the above forms of repression and in the light of its examination of numerous States parties' reports that the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (CESCR) formed the view in 1999 that "the right to education can only be enjoyed if accompanied by the academic freedom of staff and students."

Academic freedom includes the liberty of individuals to express freely opinions about the institution or system in which they work, to fulfill their functions without discrimination or fear of repression by the State or any other actor, to participate in professional or representative academic bodies, and to enjoy all the internationally recognized human rights applicable to other individuals in the same jurisdiction. The enjoyment of academic freedom carries with it obligations, such as the duty to respect the academic freedom of others, to ensure the fair discussion of contrary views, and to treat all without discrimination on any of the prohibited grounds. The enjoyment of academic freedom requires the autonomy of institutions of higher education.<sup>76</sup>

In the first half of 2016 alone the Turkish government amassed a staggering record of violations of academic freedom and freedom of expression. The threat to academic freedom and higher education worsened dramatically in the aftermath of the failed coup attempt of July 15, 2016. By the end of January 2017, in total 6,986 academics were purged from their positions, along with 41,667 teachers and employees of the Ministry of Education.

Diagram #2: The Emergency Decree Law of September 1, 2016 (KHK 672): Academic personnel who were dismissed

On August 12, 2016 the Turkish Higher Education Council announced that 5,342 academic faculty and staff (4,225 faculty members and 1,117 administrative staff) across the country were suspended and were under investigation. The travel ban imposed on all academics in the aftermath of the attempted coup and the requirement that Turkish academics abroad return to Turkey was somehow relaxed, but all faculty still required permission to travel, which would be granted by university rectors on a case-by-case basis.

Diagram #3: The Emergency Decree Laws of October 29, 2016 (KHK 675 - KHK 676) Academics who were suspended and dismissed by the Turkish Ministry of National Education

The emergency decree of September 1, 2016 (KHK 672) provided for the dismissal of 2,346 academic personnel from 94 universities across Turkey, including 455 full professors, 472 associate professors, 658 assistant professors, 420 academic research staff, 243 lecturers, and 98 other academic staff in research and teaching positions. The decree announced the permanent removal from their positions of over 40,000 civil servants, including over 28,000 members of the Ministry of Education.

The decree also canceled the passports of the purged personnel and their spouses. All of those affected by the decree were dismissed on charges of being members of a terrorist organization or undermining the national security of the state; however as in the previous cases academics were not provided any evidence to justify the dismissals and the serious charges.

The emergency decrees of October 29, 2016 (KHK 675 and KHK 676) resulted in two further disturbing assaults on higher education in Turkey:

An additional 1,267 academic personnel were dismissed from their positions at 74 universities across Turkey. Those dismissed were full professors or associate professors, assistant professors, lecturers, or other academic staff in research and teaching positions.

The decrees eliminated the system by which universities elect their own rectors and university administration, replacing it with a system whereby all rectors of public or private universities would be selected directly or indirectly by the President's Office working in coordination with the Turkish Higher Education Council (YÖK). Three candidates selected from among the academic rank faculty with at least three years' experience will be selected by YÖK to be presented to the President of the Republic, whose office will then select the candidate to be appointed rector.

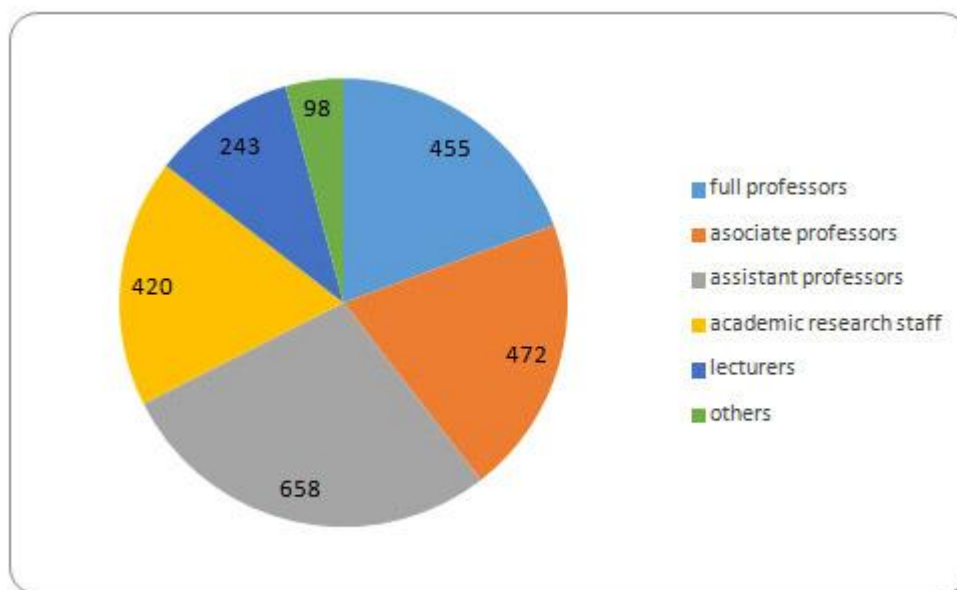

Diagram #4: The Emergency Decree Law of August 12, 2016 (KHK 672): Academic Faculty Members and Administrative Staff who were suspended and went under

The decree was immediately applied to Bogazici University, where the former vice-rector was appointed as a rector, instead of the candidate who received 84 percent of the votes. The appointed rector was also an immediate family member of an MP from the ruling party, further adding to concerns of nepotism and the political crackdown on academic freedom.

On October 31, 2016 Turkey's Science Academy issued a statement<sup>77</sup> highlighting among other things, that “allowing a central authority to decide on how every institution - especially universities where specialization is at the highest level - should conduct its affairs means to entrust the entire country to the supposed infallibility of a single individual in a world where the economy and technology advance at an immense pace.” The statement concluded by stating that “...this goes against democracy and rationality.”

The decrees of October 29th also provided for the permanent removal of over 10,000 civil servants from their positions, including more than 2,200 members of the Ministry of Education. As in the case of previous decrees, the government canceled the passports of the academic personnel and their spouses. All those affected by the decree were dismissed on very serious allegations - such as being members of a terrorist organization or undermining the national security of the state.

The above allegations do not appear to include direct involvement in the planning or execution of the attempted coup, but rather, suggestions or perception of sympathy, and financial or other ties to the organizations linked or perceived to be linked to the Gülen movement.

In addition, a significant number of those dismissed by decrees of September 1st and October 29th were reportedly either members of the leftist trade union E itim Sen, leftist, pro-Kurdish or other critical academics groups; suggesting that actions by the government (even by its own standards) were not targeting in any perceivable way individuals suspected of being connected to the coup attempt.

The scale of detentions and the arrest of academic staff, travel restrictions, suspensions and imposed resignations in the education sector go much farther than merely targeting individuals who might have had any connection to the attempted coup.

The crackdown on the education sector was rather a purge of those deemed inadequately loyal to the current government, which has already damaged the structure and autonomy of Turkish higher education through university closures, asset seizures, freezing of bank accounts, mass suspensions of faculty and staff, and investigations and detentions of academics.

The troubling actions by the Turkish government represent an unprecedented assault on the principles of academic freedom and freedom of expression and apparently seek to dismantle, at an accelerating and alarming speed, much of the existing structure of Turkish higher education through purges and restrictions. The end goal seems to be; total government control over academic institutions.

Beyond the permanent damage caused to the careers and livelihoods of many of its academia - the actions by the Turkish government will regrettably cause irreparable damage to what was perceived for years to be one of the leading systems of higher education in the region.

The situation was not satisfactory even before the attempted coup. Turkish universities have never been fully independent. Before the October 29, 2016 decree (KHK 676), all state and private universities had been under the control of the Higher Education Board (YÖK), whose head is appointed by the President of the Republic. The President also had the right to appoint the rectors of all state universities, based on YÖK recommendations, while private universities were more independent, with boards of trustees choosing rectors with the approval of the YÖK.

The attempted coup of July 15th also intensified a trend long in the making in Turkey: young, educated and affluent Turks quitting home to make new lives abroad. According to charities for at-risk scholars, the post-coup crackdown has also led to a large number of requests for help. Turkey is now the number one country for applications from under-threat scholars seeking safety in Western universities, according to two charities that help at-risk academics.<sup>78</sup>

Fears of political instability have also brought a perception of a decrease quality of education in Turkey; statements by influential people seemed to denigrate the value of learning.

Following the 1980 military coup and the oppression under the military junta that established the YÖK to bring universities under its control, several reforms were slowly implemented over the years, including the intra-university election system, with the objective of providing long needed self-governance for Turkish academia.

All those hard-won reforms were reversed in their entirety by Executive Order 676 of October 29, 2016. In its Article 85, the Executive Order provides for the power of the President to appoint all rectors, the top executive of all universities, including private run universities – in short, bringing all universities under the direct and full control of the President.

As a member state of the Council of Europe and a party to both, the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (ECHR) and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) Turkey is obliged to protect and promote freedom of thought, expression and association, all of ideas at the heart of academic freedom. Derogations of human rights under the state of emergency should always respond to the exigency of the situation and cannot arbitrarily restrict academic freedom or justify the arbitrary dismissal of thousands of academics across the country.

Academics dismissed and detained over coup charges

On July 23, 2016, 15 universities were closed and their assets were seized. Their academic personnel lost their positions under the first emergency decree.<sup>79</sup> The purge and deprivation of liberty of academics and other staff in higher education institutions have continued unabated.

Credible reports point to serious allegations of ill-treatment and torture against academics and other higher education personnel deprived of their liberty, including severe beatings, verbal and psychological abuse, as well as denial of food, water and medical treatment.

The ongoing purge and repression against academics taking place in an atmosphere of fear and paranoia, combined with a total absence of the rule of law, contribute to a mounting psychological pressure on academics and other staff of higher education institutions.

Emin Komurculer, Assistant Professor at Aydın Adnan Menderes University jumped to his death from the fourth floor of the university building on July 26, 2016. Before committing suicide he was being denied a request for a meeting with Rector Cavit Bircan, the person in charge of the “anti-Gülen operation” within the university.

Timeline of repression against academics

Closing of higher education institutions

In the aftermath of the attempted coup 15 universities, employing 2,808 academics and attended by 64,533 students, were closed and sealed as they were deemed crime scenes. In addition 823 student dormitories were closed across Turkey.<sup>80</sup> The closure left 61,382 students in academic limbo, wondering if they could continue their studies and worried about the black mark of a “Gulen movement school” on their college record.

Sixty-eight Turkish students studying abroad with a stipend provided by the Scientific Research Council of Turkey (Tübitak) were also stripped of their student status. Even before the coup, reports indicated that there were nearly 500 imprisoned students in Turkey. The current number of imprisoned students is not known.

On October 1, 2016 more than 50 Nigerian students, mainly from Fatih University, which was closed in the aftermath of the attempted coup, were detained by Turkish police at İstanbul Atatürk Airport for allegedly being students of a “terrorist organization.” The arrest and deportation of the Nigerian students came months after the Turkish ambassador to Nigeria asked the country to close 17 schools linked with the Gülen movement. According to him the schools were used to “recruit terrorists.” The Nigerian House of Representatives subsequently gave the Turkish government a seven-day ultimatum to release the students. Representatives stated that the detained students were forced to sign documents for deportation, pay penalties on the allegation of illegal entry into Turkey, humiliated and abused. Press reports also reported that members of the House of Representatives warned Turkish citizens in Nigeria of the risk of indiscriminate arrest in retaliation for the “unjustifiable assault” on Nigerian students.<sup>81</sup>

Reports have also emerged indicating that students attending the closed schools were harassed on social media and labelled as supporters of the coup, due to the fact that they attended Gülen schools. The closed universities are listed below:

İpek University, Ankara: Established in 2011 İpek University was the only Arts and Humanities University in Turkey. İpek University had nearly 1,000 students and 128 academics.

2.7. Private education

Private schools represent important contributors to economical, cultural, scientific and democratic life, as well as to positive competition in the private and public sectors. In comparable conditions there are several factors which make private schools more competitive and prone to quality education, including more managerial liberty compared to their counterparts at public schools who face certain restraints from government. Private schools also have the liberty to hire teachers in conformity with their own standards, which is not the case for public schools.

The Ministry of National Education is the authority responsible for the establishment of private schools. Along with the General Directorate of Private Educational Institutions the Ministry is also the responsible authority for supervising and inspecting private schools. Private schools cannot be founded solely for profit and their establishment is based on three major factors:

- 1 - Inability of public schools to address demand.
- 2 - Decrease in quality of public schools.
- 3 - Demands from parents for better education.

Admission to private schools is subject to the same requirements as for admission to public schools. Entrance exams are not required for admission to the primary section of private schools; however for secondary education students need to take the Transition from Primary Education to Secondary Education Exam (TEOG) organized by the Ministry of National Education. Transfers to another school are possible in accordance with the regulations set out by the Ministry of National Education.

Private schools have a different organizational structure from public schools. Their organizational structure generally includes a chairman of the board, a founding principal, vice principals, an academic board, chief financial officer, a public relations department, heads of departments, advisors, and research and development departments. Private schools have to submit their organizational regulations to the Ministry of Education for approval.

Curriculums of private schools are subject to the same regulations as public schools, while minority schools are allowed to include classes in their curriculums in their native languages and on their religions. International private schools submit their own curriculums in compliance with the Turkish state's security and interests.

The number of private schools in Turkey grew from 9,640 to 18,360 (by 91 percent) between 2009 and 2011. The number of students at private schools increased by 110 percent from 2,084,102 to 4,379,561. Most of the increase is due to the growth in the number of students in pre-schools, with the number of institutions increasing from 637 to 1,054 and the number of students from 14,585 to 100,424.

According to the 2012-2013 statistics from the Ministry of National Education the number of formal public schools was 55,648 compared to 5,942 private schools. The number of students in public schools for the same period was 15,239,207, while private schools had 613,064.<sup>82</sup>

Due to the advantages private schools offer, overall performance of students is higher compared to students studying in public schools. In terms of academic and social performance private schools in Turkey have been generally among the highest-ranking institutions. This also includes better performance in nationwide exams, the TÜBİTAK<sup>83</sup> Science Olympics and international competitions and exams.<sup>84</sup>

Among one million exam takers in the 2009 SBS exam, the ten highest scores were from private schools. Private schools also rank high in terms of school averages. The 100 highest-ranking schools in 2009 were private.<sup>85</sup> PISA annual results also show that private school students perform better in all sections of the exam than public school students.<sup>86</sup>

Finally, private schools have been among the winners of Turkish championships and regularly represent Turkey in international sport events. Based on overall studies it may be concluded that private school teachers also perform better in terms of productivity.

PART 3

ASSAULT ON TURKISH SCHOOLS ABROAD

3.1. Hizmet movement affiliated schools

The Hizmet (service, in Turkish) movement has been a phenomenon in Turkish society since the 1960s and its participants are well known for their efforts to promote secular education, and, interfaith dialogue, and to alleviate poverty, especially in the poorest parts of the country. The Hizmet movement believes that education is key to solving social and economic challenges, both in Turkey and across the globe.

With the break-up of the Soviet Union in the early 1990s, inspired by the values shared by the Hizmet movement, philanthropic businessmen were encouraged to contribute to efforts at establishing quality educational institutions in Central Asia, in order to address the existing challenges in the region. Along with providing quality education schools constantly focused on charity/humanitarian activities and dialogue; all three of the Hizmet movement's pillars of service.

Within a short period of time, with the assistance of philanthropic businessmen, Hizmet inspired schools were established and began to operate in the new Turkic republics in the territories of the former Soviet Union. Through collaboration between business people, university students, and local diaspora groups, the Hizmet movement's ideas and schools spread, initially through Europe, Australia, and North America and later Africa, Asia, and finally South America.

The standards shared by Hizmet affiliated schools abroad are built upon core principles, such as altruism, love and humility. The schools therefore reject violence and radical interpretations of Islam, with the Hizmet movement systematically rejecting the idea of using Islam as a political ideology and as a tool for political competition.

Highly enthusiastic, altruistic, and well-educated young Turkish teachers who graduated from the best universities in Turkey and elsewhere were key to the establishment, and later success of the schools. Making decisions despite minimal less material gains, and working sometimes in very difficult security environments, these determined and committed teachers, provided students with a quality education, even during times of political crisis or violent upheavals in their countries.

As an example, five students and three staff members from a Nigeria-Turkish International School located in the Isheri Area of Ogun State were kidnapped on January 13, 2017 by unidentified individuals after they gained entry to the school premises through a fence. According to Nigerian media, the abductors made a ransom demand; however this news was not confirmed. On November 24, 2017, the Nigerian police reported that the pupils and staff were all rescued unhurt.

It was mainly through these dedicated efforts that Hizmet schools made positive social and economic impact in the countries where they were operating. These impacts were especially felt, in the combat against radicalism, religious extremism and violence. As such, Turkish Hizmet inspired schools constitute one of the largest and strongest rivals of radical Islamic trends around the world.

Slowly and owing to enormous and constant efforts the Hizmet schools became a global socio-cultural entity. They constructed a universal language of peace, coinciding with the culture of peace initiative launched by the United Nations. In addition, the schools served as a cultural and economic bridge between Turkey and the host country, long before any honorary, diplomatic, or other official presence of Turkish governmental institutions were present in the respective countries. By doing so, entire populations came in contact with Turkey for the very first time through the Hizmet inspired teachers and businessmen. The experience had been an overwhelmingly positive one for host and guest.

Turkey as a nation took great pride in the many achievements and services provided by Turkish teachers abroad and rightly so. Successive Turkish governments regularly praised and appreciated the significant role the schools played in contributing to the national wealth, along with the image of the country and Turkish citizens abroad. As recently as 2012 even then-Prime Minister Erdogan and his ministers regularly praised the schools in their official visits in the respective countries.

On February 21, 2009 former President Abdullah Gül attended the inauguration of Işık Lisesi (Light High School) in Nairobi, Kenya, which accepted its first students in 2008. During the inauguration, President Gül highlighted the importance of the bridge of friendship between Turkey and Kenya. He stated, “I’m proud that Turks serve the development of Kenya through education. I believe this school will strengthen the ties of fraternity and brotherhood between the two countries. I extend my thanks to all those who are helping Turkey’s voice be heard on this continent.”

The above policy ended abruptly following the public exposure of the December 17, 2013 corruption scandal which implicated family members of AKP officials, including family members of then-Prime Minister Erdogan. Following the scandal the government labeled the allegations of corruption - “a conspiracy to topple the government,” and actively and zealously embarked upon a mission to discredit, criminalize and eventually liquidate the Hizmet/Gülen movement in Turkey and abroad, for its perceived and alleged role in the corruption investigations.

The Hizmet-affiliated schools came under immense pressure after the Turkish government declared Hizmet “public enemy number one” both in Turkey and abroad. Since 2014 the government has pursued a persistent, coordinated and systematic campaign against Hizmet schools abroad by claiming that these schools were an extension of a “parallel state” – a term coined by Erdogan to label individuals and Civil society groups that refused to participate in government wrongdoings.

The Turkish government tried to shut down Hizmet-inspired schools in countries from Latin America to the Balkans; from, Central Asia to in particular, Africa. Closing these schools has been, since 2014, an undisputed priority of Turkish foreign policy.

Among many irrational actions in the foreign policy of the Turkish government, foreign governments were particularly “puzzled,” by these actions, since the same government “lobbied” to a certain extent, for the establishment and opening of these schools in the first place. In addition, targeting its own citizens abroad diminished a core soft power element of Turkish foreign policy. The influence of the schools was widely considered something unique in contemporary foreign relations.

The government campaign has generally had little effect beyond Turkish borders. Most foreign governments considered such requests an attempt to intervene in their internal affairs, since they had no legal grounds for closure and Hizmet affiliated schools or their personnel had not been accused of any wrongdoings.

The July 15th attempted coup only served to intensify the Turkish government's efforts. The government started using the failed coup as a pretext to shut down thousands of the best secular schools in Turkey, none of which had any record of criminal activity. Turkey's government further mobilized the nation's diplomatic, economic, and political power to hunt down members of the Hizmet movement abroad, asking foreign governments to jail and deport such members, as well as shut down their institutions, including high-performing science schools.

According to a Foreign Ministry source, from July 15 to November 18, 2016 Turkish diplomats met around 600 ministers and, 1,444 foreign members of parliament, in addition to nearly 6,190 senior officials globally to explain the so-called “FETÖ structure and its vast network abroad.” The same source revealed that Turkish diplomats also contacted international media outlets 2,270 times, wrote 448 articles and letters, and organized 236 news meetings on the same issue.<sup>87</sup>

Among their efforts against Hizmet affiliated schools abroad in 2016 Turkey's government succeeded in presenting a political resolution adopted by the 57-member Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) that described the Gulen movement as “terrorist.” The Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) also labelled the Gulen movement “a terror group” in a political statement made at the foreign ministers’ meeting in October 2016. They did so, without any evidence.

A morally corrupt, unlawful, and perhaps criminal campaign of intimidation of Turkish teachers, as well as kidnappings and alleged murders, either directly by intelligence operatives or through criminals in foreign countries, took place during 2016. There were even reports allegedly showing that the Turkish National Intelligence Organization (MİT) orchestrated the assassinations of six teachers in an attack on a school bus in Mogadishu in March 2016.

Five employees of a Turkish school in Mogadishu, including two volunteer teachers from Azerbaijan and Turkey were killed when unidentified gunmen attacked a school bus carrying students, teachers and school staff in the Somali capital of Mogadishu, on March 30, 2016. The teachers who lost their lives in the attack were identified as Turkish national Hıdır Çalka and Azerbaijani national Banu Kemaliye İsmailov. The other victims of the attack included the school bus driver, the security guard and the translator for the school. Five other individuals, including two students were also injured in the attack.<sup>88</sup>

Passports of many teachers in several countries have been cancelled leaving their bearers in legal limbo, with Turkish diplomatic and consular missions unlawfully rejecting requests for birth registrations from Turkish citizens. Among three new decree-laws pursuant to Turkey's state of emergency on January 6, 2017, Decree-Law 68089 seeks to directly target teachers and academics ( and their family members) teaching in top quality educational private institutions in more than a hundred countries. Among other troubling provisions placing arbitrary restrictions on human rights and freedoms, a particularly chilling aspect of Decree-Law 680 is the introduction of a measure revoking the citizenship of individuals abroad, who do not respond to judicial summons issued by courts or prosecutors within 90 days.

The Turkish government's full-frontal assault against the peaceful, open- hearted, and humble members of the Gülen movement, who have done nothing wrong other than volunteering their time, money and expertise to improve the lives of people around the world represents an assault on the right to education. It is an "open invitation" for radical groups to readily fill the gap in many countries.

Several sections below illustrate the unprecedented persecution the Turkish teachers face in respective countries, mostly in Africa. But these stories also illustrate the teachers' resilience in the face of an unprecedented and illegal crackdown.

3.2. The Maarif Foundation

In late May 2016, the government presented a draft-law to Parliament aiming to establish a foundation (the Maarif<sup>90</sup> Foundation), which would operate under the Ministry of National Education. The bill was adopted by the Turkish Parliament on June 17, 2016 and entered into force as Law No. 6721 on the “Turkish Maarif Foundation.”

Legally, the purpose and scope of the law was to establish the Maarif Foundation, with a total budget of 1 million Turkish liras,<sup>91</sup> with the objective of providing education services in foreign countries at the elementary, middle and higher levels, as well as offering private courses, culture centers, libraries, laboratories, arts and sports centers, and dormitories for students and instructors.<sup>92</sup>

In reality the Maarif Foundation is the organization established and tasked by the Turkish government with encouraging foreign governments to seize Turkish educational foundations already operating in their respective countries, possibly targeting enterprises run by individuals close to the Gülen movement. In the event seizures are successful, through different legal, administrative and practical actions, the Maarif Foundation would be offered as an alternative foundation with the authority to purchase, take over, and rent properties.

According to the founding act,<sup>93</sup> the Foundation will be overseen by a 12-member Board of Trustees, including four members from the presidency, three from the cabinet of ministers, two from the Education Ministry, and one member from each - the Foreign Ministry, the Finance Ministry and Turkey’s Higher Education Board of Education (YÖK). The executive organ of the Maarif Foundation is the Board of Directors consisting of one chairman and six members, which has the authority to represent the Foundation. The Supervisory Board consists of five principal and five alternate members overseeing the activities and accounts of the Turkish Education Foundation on behalf of the Board of Trustees.

Concerns related to Maarif schools

With the establishment of the Maarif Foundation targeting illegal takeovers of Hizmet inspired schools around the world the Turkish government has already “sealed Maarif schools fate,” which are likely to have an unfortunate and inescapable end.

The persisting issues go indeed beyond merely establishing the Maarif Foundation, the immense pressure on foreign governments and the legal considerations in a given country as to whether it is possible to arbitrarily seize property from its rightful owners and transfer it to other entities with or without any compensation. Right to property is a human right enshrined among others in Article 17 of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which provides that - “Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property.”

One of the main questions experts have also raised in this context is whether the Maarif

Foundation, an organization fully controlled and currently backed by the Turkish government - whose education policies have been highly unsuccessful in Turkey can be successful in other countries?

The sixth PISA,<sup>94</sup> a test of the science, mathematics, and reading skills of 15-year-olds from around the world published by the OECD on December 6, 2016, revealed that Turkey is second from the bottom among 35 OECD countries in mathematics, science, and reading scores. Turkey has slipped an average of seven places in mathematics, science, and reading compared to its rankings in the 2012

PISA survey. Turkey ranked 44th among all countries in math in 2012 and it slid to 49th place in 2015. In science, Turkey ranked 43rd in 2012, while in 2015 it ranked 52nd. In reading Turkey ranked 41st in 2012, while it got to 50th place in 2015.

The example of the first Maarif school<sup>95</sup> opened in Georgia on September 19, 2016 is a prime example reflecting the above concerns:

Batumi City Hall reported that the school had not acquired a construction license and had been fined three times (before September 19, 2016) for a total of 9,000 Georgian Lari.<sup>96</sup> City Hall's Supervisory Service had also stated that the school must acquire an official permit or it may have to be demolished. The Turkish Consul-General in Tbilisi reported that the building was built by an unnamed philanthropist,<sup>97</sup> and the diplomatic mission was not involved into the construction process. He further promised to look into any violations that may have occurred during the construction of the building.

<sup>95</sup> Batumi Turkish School could reportedly accommodate up to 170 students and 25 teachers. The school would follow the Turkish curriculum and be supervised by Turkey's National Education Ministry.

<sup>96</sup> The equivalent of around 3,333 US Dollars, based on November 2016 average exchange rate. Several sources identified the philanthropist as Galip Ozturk, the board chairman of Metro Holding Company. <http://aa.com.tr/en/asia-pacific/turkey-opens-first-state-school-in-georgias-batumi-/648638>.

The opening ceremony was attended by representatives of the Turkish Ministry of Education, as well as the Embassy of Turkey in Georgia; however neither the Georgian Minister of Education nor local education authorities<sup>98</sup> were invited to participate in the opening event. According to local media they did not hide their dissatisfaction about the matter. The Turkish Consul-General also claimed that the school has “not officially opened,” which explains why the Georgian side was not invited to the recent opening ceremony.

The former Director of the Adiyaman Gerger Imam Hatip High School (M.K), who served in that post as a sexual abuse scandal unfolded (involving as many as 75 victims among students)<sup>99</sup> was appointed principal of the Batumi school. Other alarming concerns on the principal’s background appeared in other Georgian media outlets.

In addition, the activities the Maarif Foundation is expected to perform, and its intended takeover of the Hizmet inspired schools, represent numerous other challenges, including the following:

Affiliation with an oppressive foreign government with a clear political Islamic agenda, and acting on that government’s instructions in a sovereign country, would unmistakably contribute to further youth radicalization and extremism.

The current government in Turkey already has a disturbing track-record of gathering intelligence through the Turkish Religious Affairs Directorate (Diyanet), amid reports that the Diyanet has asked imams to spy and inform on people of Turkish origin suspected of being active in the Gülen movement.<sup>100</sup> In a briefing to the parliamentary Coup Commission in December 2016, the Diyanet openly admitted it had gathered intelligence and prepared reports on sympathizers of the Gülen movement in 38 countries and regions.<sup>101</sup>

Fully dependent on the Turkish government, the Maarif schools will not only advance the government's narrative and objectives, but undoubtedly also act as “foreign agents” gathering intelligence and sensitive information.

Apart from the Turkish government, groups funding the Maarif Foundation are the Saudi government and the Islamic Development Bank.

Legitimate concerns about the future functioning of Maarif schools are real, should the current or future governments withdraw their financial, diplomatic and (almost) unlimited support to the Foundation. Should the governments in the Maarif Foundation fade in the future, the institutions it administers will suffer – and so will the students attending those institutions.

3.3. Yavuz Selim Anatolian School (YSAS) – The Gambia

Yavuz Selim Anatolian School was established in 2010 in Kanifing, Gambia and provided an international, all-English education (with French and Turkish taught as foreign languages) for students from three-years-old through senior secondary school. The school was attended by mostly Gambian students, along with a strong presence of students from other nationalities.

The school's broader objective was to develop an international and multicultural perspective among students and parents and to make possible international education to as many students as possible.

In the view of the Gambian officials, “the school would add more quality to the education in Gambia, bringing more understanding between the Turkish and Gambian cultures.” In addition, they shared high hopes that the school would set the ground for expansion into more primary, and secondary schools and perhaps even universities, all to be established, in the future. These valuable institutions could help cultivate a generation of global intellectuals by opening new possibilities to global opportunities.

Contrary to the above hopes, in March 2014, in an abrupt move the Gambian authorities ordered the immediate closure of Yavuz Selim Anatolian School, through what was reportedly “a one- sentence letter” addressed to the school's principal, who in turn immediately informed all parents of the government's decision to close the school. Pupils and students who attended Yavuz Selim Anatolian School, including the nursery, the primary and school, junior and senior secondary sections, were simply sent home.

Unlike in previous cases when the Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education (MoBSE) of Gambia announced that a particular school in the country has been closed for not complying with national regulations, in this case the MoBSE did not mention any reason for the school's closure.

The sudden closure of the school coincided with the return of the former President Yahya Jammeh from a state visit to Ankara.<sup>102</sup> On that occasion, Gambian and Turkish officials signed a number of cooperation agreements in the fields of health, defense, taxation, culture, sports, education, and security.

Then-Prime Minister Erdogan allegedly offered Gambia $500 million to convince them to shut down the Yavuz Selim Anatolian School (YSAS). It was also revealed that he allegedly conveyed false information to the Gambian President that - “all Turkish schools abroad had been shut down except for those in Gambia.”

The revelation of Erdogan's efforts to have Gambia shut down the school prompted thousands of social media reactions to the scandal. Many argued that Erdogan move was not only against his own citizens' right to free enterprise, but also against the right to education and the inherent right of Gambian children to obtain a quality education.

3.4. Nile Organization Institutions - Somalia

For over 20 years, civil conflict turned Somalia into a failed state. The lack of a functioning government for a long period of time led to the disintegration of the education system, particularly in the southern part of the country. With an estimated ninety percent of schools either damaged or destroyed, two generations of Somali children missed their opportunity to attend school.

With few exceptions, such as in the more stable autonomous state of Somaliland, Somalia has had one of the lowest primary school enrollment rates in the world; with 18 percent for boys and 15 percent for girls at the primary school level, and 12 percent for boys and 8 percent for girls at the secondary level.<sup>103</sup> Only 20 percent of the population was literate in 2012.<sup>104</sup>

The Gülen movement schools began operating back in 2011 starting with only 40 students. The conditions were challenging, with the primary objective being to empower communities, the people, the Somalian government to continue to invest in Somali children's educational needs. Owing to the dedication and efforts of the administration and staff - within only two years, the schools offered modern vocational training for Somali children, in an extremely difficult security and infrastructure environment.

In 2014, the schools were attended by a total of 450 students, who were taught by fourteen Turkish, six Somali and two Egyptian teachers. The schools were successful not only in Somalia, but also internationally, as students attending them were winning medals<sup>105</sup> and honoring Somalia at international competitions. There were increased hopes for a better future for the country's children.

<sup>105</sup> In only two years from their establishment, students of Turkish schools in Somalia won a total of 22 medals in Olympic competitions.

Owing to this success, the schools managed to achieve in just a few years, even Somali families who had previously migrated to Europe started sending their children to Turkish schools located in Mogadishu. Special quotas were also reserved for the high number of orphans from the civil war; 30% of students in the elementary schools and 20% in the high schools.

In addition, with the assistance of Kimse Yok Mu, a Turkish relief organization,<sup>106</sup> approximately one thousand students were sent to Turkey, where most of them would enroll in high schools, and the rest attended universities.

Kimse Yok Mu's contribution to Somalia was very significant as it included setting-up and running refugee camps, providing hot meals to around 90,000 people daily, restoring the Banadir hospital,<sup>107</sup> providing emergency and routine health care services, and providing clean water supplies.

On July 16, 2016, a few hours after the attempted coup in Turkey, the Somali government convened in an extraordinary session and ordered Turkish citizens working for the Gülen movement affiliated Nile Organization schools and hospital "to leave the country within seven days." The government further decided that services provided by the closed organizations, including in education and health care "would continue to be provided under new administration." The closed institutions working under the umbrella of the Nile Foundation included:

The Bedir Turkish High School in Mogadishu
 Kiblenuma Elementary School
 Kiblenuma Girl's School
 DEVA Hospital

<sup>106</sup> Kimse Yok Mu Foundation, functioning as the corporate body of aid and relief activities for the Gülen movement aims to eradicate poverty-one of the three greatest enemies of society, along with ignorance and disunity.

Somaliland administration in northwestern Somalia refused to follow in the footsteps of the federal government and did not undertake any actions to close the Somaliland Vifak Turkish School. Reacting to the decision by the federal government, the Somaliland administration reported that it had not indicted Nile Academy before its courts. According to Somaliland administration the courts should first hear any case against Nile Academy if Somaliland was to suspend or close the Turkish school.

The closed educational and health institutions operating in Somalia were never accused of any wrongdoing. On the contrary, Somali officials had often praised the significant work and efforts of the Gülen movement institutions their efforts to rebuild the country's collapsed education system. In 2014, the Somali Higher Education and Culture Minister<sup>108</sup> emphasized the Turkish schools' contribution to the Somali people and students, adding that, "...these successful schools<sup>109</sup> have renewed our hopes regarding the future of Somalia."

The Somali government itself admitted "the pragmatic move" came in response to a request from the Turkish government, out of fear that if not complied with, the generous aid by the Turkish government would be discontinued in the future.

The Turkish government had provided Somalia close to one billion dollars' worth of aid, investments and infrastructure rebuilding since 2011. Turkey also refurbished Mogadishu's seaport and airport and built schools and hospitals as well as roads in Mogadishu. At the time of the attempted coup, several thousand Somalis were studying in Turkish schools on charitable sponsorships.

After the schools closure and the departure of 40 staff members and their families, a source within the Somali government revealed that the schools and the hospital affiliated with the Nile Academy would continue operating under the control of Turkey's Embassy in Mogadishu. The hospital operated by the Nile Academy would be closed and its property would be transferred to the Somalia-Turkey Training and Research Hospital.

Role of Nile Organization schools in the fight against violent extremism

Somalia's armed terrorist and al-Qaeda linked al-Shabaab shares many of Boko Haram's <sup>110</sup> views on education. Security challenges and lack of access to large areas in Somalia have made it impossible to determine the exact number of schools, students and education staff attacked by Al-Shabaab. The United Nations estimated that at least 79 attacks on education were carried out during 2012 alone, affecting at least 5,677 children.<sup>111</sup>

In October 2011, a suicide attack by Al-Shabaab<sup>112</sup> at the Ministry of Education killed an estimated 100 or more people,<sup>113</sup> many of whom were students and parents waiting for scholarship examination results. An earlier suicide attack in December 2009 at Benadir University's graduation ceremony in Mogadishu killed the Minister of Education and two other government ministers, along with two Somali journalists, the dean of Mogadishu's medical school and more than 10 students.<sup>114</sup>

On March 30, 2016 5 employees of a Turkish school, including two volunteer teachers from Azerbaijan and Turkey, were killed in Mogadishu, when unidentified gunmen attacked a school bus carrying students, teachers, and school staff. Five other individuals, including two students were also injured in the attack.

In building schools and hospitals in Somalia, the Gülen movement was not only providing excellent education to children of a war-ravaged country – it was indeed actively contributing to winning the war against the al-Qaeda linked al-Shabaab group, which continues to recruit young children into their ranks daily. It has been widely accepted that military action alone against the insurgents will not end terrorism, nor lead to peace, not in Somalia or elsewhere. A lasting difference in Somalia's future will only come if more emphasis is placed on education.

Hizmet affiliated schools therefore acted as a “panacea” against radicalization and violent extremism in conflict areas.

Like other Hizmet schools around the world, the closed schools in Somalia “supported upward social mobility, providing the confidence and skill-sets for students to change their own circumstances; exposed students to different religions and cultures through mixed classes and support, particularly for vulnerable students through bursary and supplementary education. They exemplified positive role models and positive activism, and thus providing students with an attractive and convincing alternative to the ‘victimized’ self-image and the false sense of idealism which is preyed on and presented, respectively, by violent extremists.”<sup>115</sup>

3.5. Sudanese Turkish schools – The Sudan

Initially opened in 1999 in Khartoum (The Sudan), two schools established by Turkish volunteers were among the best accomplished schools in the capital, nurturing and educating future generations of Sudanese students. The two schools taught more than 800 students of different nationalities, though most of them were Sudanese nationals.

Following the attempted coup, the two schools were closed, along with a language school, three cultural centers, a magazine and two student dormitories. The schools had always been very successful institutions, ranking fourth in average among more than 800 private schools operating in Khartoum.

Sudanese actions against Hizmet-related schools in the Sudan began well before July 15, 2016. According to Turkish diplomats, on the basis of a request coming from Turkey, local officials in Sudan started taking steps to close Hizmet schools in January 2015.

On August 4, 2016 the Sudanese President Omer al-Bashir issued a decision to close all the entities in the country related to the Hizmet movement. The above decision was announced less than a week after a call by President Erdogan to the Sudanese authorities urging them to close Hizmet-linked schools. According to the Turkish Embassy “a large number of teachers,” including school principals were detained and asked to leave the country. Their fate remains unknown.

According to Sudanese officials, the initial plan included the transfer of school ownership to a private Sudanese company, or launching a project to nationalize Hizmet-related schools, with the Turkish Ministry of Education “providing assistance” during the nationalization process. By the beginning of December however, the Turkish Embassy in Khartoum reported<sup>116</sup> that the schools and other seized entities would be taken over by Turkey’s Maarif (Education) Foundation, in accordance with a protocol signed earlier between Khartoum and Ankara.

3.6. International Chad Educational Institutions – Chad

The International Chad Educational Institutions were founded back in 2001 with only 17 students. They have been continuously growing, constantly offering an increasingly higher quality education to children in Chad.

By 2016 three schools, offering quality education to approximately 600 students were established in N'Djamena. They included a kindergarten, a primary school and girls' college (in the Klemat district) and a boys' college in East Diguel district. The teaching complex was open to all students without distinction between belief, race or nationality. It employed more than 120 Chadian nationals, with more than 90 being teachers. They were supported in their activity by 8 teachers, 3 principals, and a Turkish accountant.

On August 22, 2016, reporting through Anadolu Agency, the Turkish representative in N'Djamena expressed its hope that the Chadian government would shut down the “Chadian – Turkish school Complex.” He further reported spending the previous few weeks trying to “convince” the Chadian Authorities that the schools had in his words) a “sectarian objective”, extensively propagated by schools and hidden behind an allegedly “noble mission”.

During respective meetings with Chadian authorities at the highest levels the Turkish representative had falsely demonized the Hizmet movement by claiming that instead of offering a high quality education, the schools trained elites to be devoted to their “Chief” (Fethullah Gulen). Blaming the Hizmet movement for the failed coup, the representative also indirectly accused the movement of “supporting extremism.”

By November 2016 the International Chadian-Turkish School Complex was renamed Bahar International School Complex.

This change was also made public through notary advertisements published in the press.

The official explanation on the renaming of the complex was the need to avoid the confusion which could arise by linking the name of the school with Turkey and its government - emphasizing the need for the authorities, as well as the Chadian and Turkish people to understand that the school complex is an entity owned by a private company, which follows the official program and curricula of the Ministry of National Education of Chad.

According to the school management, from 2001 to 2012 the schools “represented” Turkey in Chad and were serving as an intermediary in the development of relations between the two countries. With the opening of the Turkish embassy in N'Djamena in 2012, people continued to confuse the schools (the former International Chadian- Turkish School Complex) with the Turkish Embassy or any consular services.

On November 18, 2016 Turkey and Chad signed a Protocol to transfer the International Chad Educational Institutions to the notorious Maarif Foundation, a subsidiary of the Turkish government.

3.7. PakTurk International Schools and Colleges – Pakistan

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan, with a population of around 195 million<sup>117</sup> is the 7th biggest country in the world and has an average literacy rate of around 50 percent and, less than half that for women. The education system struggles to sufficiently meet the demands of the school-age population (ages 5-14), which is approximately 41.5 million young people.<sup>118</sup>

Up to 50 percent of school-age children, an estimated 24 million children are not enrolled in an educational institution.<sup>119</sup> More than 30,000 school buildings in the country are too dangerous for use, posing a threat to the well-being of children, whereas an estimated number of 21,000 schools have no permanent building whatsoever.

In addition to addressing low access to education, other challenges faced by the education sector include poor quality of education, gender inequities, inadequate funding, and at the district and provincial levels. These challenges intensify with continued spikes in the youth population.<sup>120</sup>

It is estimated that during a ten-year period (2003-2013) more than 47,000 people were killed in terrorism-related violence in the country.<sup>121</sup> Attacks by domestic terrorist organizations have had and continue to have immense implications for physical security, and also greatly impact the domestic social and political fabric.

Addressing the issue has been increasingly complex; requiring, inter alia, more active engagement of educational and academic institutions. Indeed, one of the main conclusions and recommendations that have come out repeatedly from national and international experts is the need to “strengthen civil society initiatives to reform the education curriculum, and engage large media house executives to support programming that covers inter-faith and inter-sectarian harmony, tolerance, and diversity within the religious framework.”

PakTurk International Schools and Colleges were set up by an international Turkish non-government organization, the PakTurk International Cag Educational Foundation (PakTurk ICEF). The first schools were established in 1995, and since then the PakTurk Foundation network has grown to include twenty-eight (28) schools in the cities of Islamabad, Lahore, Quetta, Karachi, Peshawar, Rawalpindi, Multan, Hyderabad, Khairpur and Jamshoro.

The schools employ around 1,500 trained teachers with an enrollment of around 11,000 students, ranging from pre-school to A levels.<sup>122</sup> An estimated 120 teachers, administration and staff were Turkish citizens. The PakTurk plans included the recent establishment of a higher education institution.

In 2011, the PakTurk Education Foundation Company Limited by Guaranty has been registered as nonprofit local organization with the Security Exchange Commission of Pakistan. With permission of the Pakistani government, all PakTurk International Schools and Colleges were transferred to this local organization.

PakTurk International School and Colleges are affiliated with the Federal Board of Intermediate and Secondary Schools of Pakistan as well as with the Cambridge system for O and A levels<sup>123</sup> and provide affordable quality education to all segments of population across the country - with significant scholarships to deserving students, so that they may pursue their ambitions through obtaining a high-quality education.

PakTurk International Schools and Colleges are the first and the only educational institution in Pakistan obtaining Oxford Quality Certificate by the University of Oxford in the United Kingdom, one of the leading universities in the world.

The Pak-Turk schools and colleges have in the past actively contributed to the achievement of Pakistan's Millennium Development Goals. The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the set of 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) were unanimously adopted at the United Nations General Assembly Summit in September 2015. The goals came into force in January 2016 and will drive international development work for the next fifteen years.

<sup>122</sup> The A Level (Advanced Level of Cambridge system) is a subject-based qualification conferred as part of the General Certificate of Education, as well as a school leaving qualification offered by educational bodies of the UK and British dependencies to students completing secondary or pre-university education.

<sup>123</sup> Cambridge O Level is an internationally recognized qualification equivalent to Cambridge IGCSE and the UK GCSE.

Whilst education drivers and outcomes cut across the entire agenda, Goal 4 specifically addresses education - ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all. The new agenda represents a fundamental shift in developing thinking by recognizing the underlying and dynamic interlinkages between the three dimensions (social, economic, and environmental), driving universal and integrated development across all countries, and promoting inclusivity, equity, quality, and lifelong learning through education.

In addition, Goal 16 of the Sustainable Development Goals is dedicated to the promotion of peaceful and inclusive societies for sustainable development, the provision of access to justice for all, and building effective, accountable institutions at all levels.

The contribution of PakTurk schools against radicalization of youth and their efforts against fundamentalism are widely recognized not only in Pakistan but also all over the world. In an article published in 2008,<sup>124</sup> the New York Times praised the schools as “an alternative approach that could help reduce the influence of Islamic extremists.”

PakTurk Education Foundation (International Schools and Colleges) were awarded the Sitara-e-Eisaar<sup>125</sup> medal by the President of Pakistan through a resolution adopted by the National Assembly in 2006; they are viewed as some of Pakistan’s best educational institutions - in terms of infrastructure, quality of education and also character-building. They carried a strong brand value in Pakistan, apparently embodying the best of Pakistan and Turkey.

PakTurk educational institutions encourage students to take part in various local and international project competitions in various educational disciplines preparation activities are performed in accordance with a prescribed timetable, with clean-cut achievement aims and periodical assessment sessions.

At PakTurk, competing in international science Olympiads is not a dream but a tradition. Each year witnesses the participation and success of PakTurk students across the globe,<sup>126</sup> with 274 medals received during national and international projects and Olympiad competitions in the USA, UK, Netherlands, Romania, Georgia, Azerbaijan, Kenya, Uganda, Thailand, Indonesia, Turkey, Pakistan, and other countries - including 133 Gold Medals, 53 Silver Medals and 88 Bronze Medals since 1995.

In a long history of winning at international competitions, Habibullah Hal Muhammad from Lahore's PakTurk International School and College was named the 2011 Intel grand winner for a project at the Intel National Science Fair. His project, "Organic Battery," represented Pakistan at the International Science and Engineering Fair 2011 in Los Angeles, California.

On December 23, 2013, speaking at the Pakistan-Turkey Business Forum, organized with then-Prime Minister Erdogan, Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif pointed out the historical alliance between the two countries and praised the PakTurk schools, adding that "the 23 PakTurk schools have played a great role in improving relations between the two countries in terms of cultural and emotional bonds." Similar remarks have been also made by other high level officials on similar occasions in both, Pakistan and Turkey.

PakTurk International Schools also contributed through its cultural and humanitarian assistance programs, to the recovery in the wake of October 8, 2005 earthquake. PakTurk rebuilt 10 schools in Muzaffarabad and donated 10 million US dollars in cash to the Pakistani government for earthquake affected, internally displaced individuals in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, as well as those impacted by the 2010 Floods. In addition, PakTurk built 450 houses for flood affected individuals in Muzaffargarh (Pakistan).

The schools have disclaimed affiliation with any other political, religious or denominational movement stressing that they are “a philanthropic and non-political endeavor established for human development in the field of education for the benefit of all Pakistanis, especially the poor, needy and the deserving sections of the society.” PakTurk schools and colleges prescribe a strong Western curriculum, with courses taught in English, whereas religion is not taught beyond the one class in Islamic studies that is required by the state.

In the beginning of August 2016, as part of a reorganization effort of the PakTurk network, as many as 28 principals of Turkish nationality were removed from their posts. The Board of Directors (BoD) of PakTurk was also dissolved and a new six-member BoD with complete local representation had been formed to run the affairs of the school. Turkish nationals holding managerial positions were now serving as teachers in PakTurk schools.

PakTurk International Schools and Colleges and the impact of the attempted coup in Turkey

At a media briefing on July 23, 2016 the Turkish Ambassador in Pakistan stated that - “we have called on all friendly countries to prevent activities of this (Hizmet) group.” These “calls” were reinforced during the 2-day visit to Pakistan by the Foreign Affairs Minister of Turkey on August 1-2, 2016.<sup>127</sup>

The Turkish government's request that Pakistan close the PakTurk schools put the Pakistani government in a quandary as it constantly attempts to get a grip on an education sector in which normally militant Islamists and jihadists factor prominently.<sup>128</sup>

Closing down schools that adequately prepare students for a modern society and economy is something Pakistan's deeply troubled education sector could ill afford. The dilemma for the Pakistani government seemed to have been stark, since the Turkish government warned that Turkey would be at war with any country that cooperates or aids the Gülen movement.

<sup>128</sup> Senior government officials concede that they have no accurate overview of how many schools exist in Pakistan, particularly when it comes to Islamic seminaries or madrassas.

Even though it was clear that many Pakistanis and the public did not want to follow along, facing the increased pressure from Turkey to close the institutions run by the PakTurk Foundation, a Pakistani official was quoted as stating. “Though we haven’t received a formal request yet from Ankara (regarding the educational institutions run by the PakTurk Foundation), the deep relations with Turkey demand that we don’t look out for formalities and remove Ankara’s concerns on priority at all costs.”

A few days later however, the official request by the Turkish government demanded that the PakTurk International schools and colleges be transferred from the current owners, the PakTurk Education Foundation - to the Maarif Foundation.<sup>129 - 130</sup>

The above request - to now transfer administration/ownership to the Maarif Foundation triggered outrage from different segments of Pakistani society. The fact that the PakTurk Education Foundation, a duly registered NGO, has been operating these schools and colleges for the last 21 years under Pakistani laws, made it difficult for the Pakistani government to fulfill the latest demand to transfer the ownership and administration of the educational institutions.

There were serious concerns that the government not causes any damage to the students. The prospective of handing over the schools to the Maarif Foundation, a radical organization (with the primary objective of advancing a political Islam agenda) working under the Turkish government raised legitimate concerns that the transfer, considered to be against domestic law, would also affect the ideological base of the schools - turning them into institutions spreading extremist views and indoctrinating of youth with extremist ideas, thus contributing to further fundamentalism and radicalization among the youth.

In November 2016, in a clearly unconstitutional move, the Pakistani government amended the companies' ordinance, with a view of enabling the Maarif Foundation to eventually take over the schools instead of its Pakistani management. The addition of the clause in section 42 of the amended law aimed at directly targeting PakTurk Schools through:

First, revoking their licenses;<sup>131</sup> and

Second, transferring their assets to another company.<sup>132</sup>

Right to property is enshrined in clear and unambiguous terms in Article 24 of the Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan (1973) as a fundamental right, entitling an owner of a property to hold and enjoy his property as long as he does not infringe any law regarding the same.

Similarly, article 17 of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights provides that - "Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property." Relevant to the case of the PakTurk schools in Pakistan, in 2008 the Commission on the Legal Empowerment of the Poor, a working group under the UNDP co-chaired by former U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and Peruvian economist Hernando De Soto, published a report entitled "Making the Law Work for everyone."<sup>133</sup>

<sup>131</sup> The commission may at any time by order in writing, revoke a license granted under sub-section (1) with such direction as it may fit on being satisfied that the company has acted against the interest, sovereignty and integrity of Pakistan, the security of the state and friendly relations with foreign states."

<sup>132</sup> All the assets of the company after satisfaction of all debts and liabilities in a manner, as may be specified, be transferred to another company licensed under section 42, preferably having similar or identical objectives to those of the company, within 90 days from the revocation of the license or such extended period as may be allowed by the commission."

The report concludes that the right to property must be understood as a “fundamental human right” essential for the integrity of the individual. In addition, the report concluded that:

- Property rights are essential for economic development.
- In the absence of generalized and equitable property rights most economic activity does not develop its full potential even for powerful actors.
- In the absence of generalized and equitable property rights there is a high likelihood of social unrest.
- There may be under-accumulation of human capital resulting in a low-quality labor force, and little demand for credit, resulting in underdeveloped financial institutions and ultimately hindered growth. There is also less foreign investment or flight of capital when property rights are not guaranteed.
- The report also points to the lack of property rights as a factor in civil armed conflict around the world.

Arbitrary and mass expulsions

On November 14, 2016, only two days before a planned two-day visit by the Turkish President, the Ministry of Interior informed the Turkish teachers that their applications for visa extensions, pending since July 2016 had been declined. Teachers were however advised to continue teaching while simultaneously “keeping a low profile,” in order not to trigger any adverse reaction and further pressure from the Turkish government. Prior to that move, Islamabad had also refused to grant visas to new Turkish teachers.

In an abrupt move aimed at “appeasing” Ankara ahead of the visit by the Turkish President,<sup>134</sup> on November 16, 2016 the Pakistani government cancelled all valid visas and ordered the teachers, management and their family members (approximately 450 Turkish citizens), including women and school-going children - to leave the country within three days.<sup>135</sup> Many of the teachers had contributed to the education sector in Pakistan for more than 20 years.

The government’s decision to deport dozens of Turkish teachers was “politically - motivated” and sparked protest demonstrations in major cities. Several hundred students in Islamabad, Lahore and Karachi demonstrated against the decision. Around 300 parents and students voiced outrage at the decision during the demonstration in Islamabad, where they waved waving placards and called for “justice”.

“We want our teachers to stay, we want to study,” 17-year-old student Abdullah Tahir told AFP. “Of course we all know that they (the teachers) are not terrorists. Why are we treating them with cruelty? If they go back to Turkey, they will also arrest them. What is their mistake?”

Surely nobody believed the Turkish government’s warning about the alleged threat the so-called Gülen Network presented to Pakistan, though the Turkish government's view was that Hizmet members were “just as dangerous to Pakistan as other extremist organizations.” Allegations by the Turkish government about the Pak- Turk schools “spreading extremism and fundamentalism” and defaming teachers and schools that were among the best in the country, were considered simply “ridiculous”.

<sup>134</sup> During the visit President Erdoğan described the decision by Pakistan as “very pleasing” <http://www.bbc.com/news/world-asia-38005302>.

The same schools had been previously praised by many officials from many Pakistani experts called the move “troubling” since Pakistan faces an acute education deficit and could do with all the help it can get, in that area. In addition, the government faces a huge challenge concerning so-called educational institutes that spread hatred, violence and even terrorism and the PakTurk schools were successfully contributing to counter those threats.

Human rights organizations such as Amnesty International noted that “with 24 million Pakistani children out of school, Pakistan’s decision to expel teachers from the PakTurk International Schools and Colleges will only hurt Pakistan’s children. What the country needs is more classrooms and more teachers, not a politically-motivated decision to purge educators at the behest of the Turkish government.”

As much as the above statement by Amnesty International holds true, it failed to highlight serious concerns about the fate of the Turkish teachers and their families, whose children had their studies disrupted in the middle of the school year.

Immediately after the shocking decision was transmitted to the schools, due to the short 72-hour notice and termination of work contracts, families were forced to sell, whatever they could of their belongings while simultaneously trying to avoid, by any means returning (either forcibly or voluntarily) to Turkey, where they would have been subjected to hardships ill-treatment, and perhaps even torture.

Their fears are not unsubstantiated. Following the July 15th coup attempt, Turkish authorities had undertaken an unprecedented purge, targeting citizens from all walks of life, in particular the education, media, military, and justice sectors, with measures introduced under the umbrella of the state of emergency severely limiting individual rights and liberties.

From the perspective of the Pakistani public the decision to deport the Turkish teachers, especially given their contributions and efforts to provide quality education was unconscionably immoral. Legally, the decision was constitutionally unjustifiable, given that no teacher or staff member had broken any laws and even if they had, they should have had the right to due process.

Indeed, multi-agency investigations launched after the failed coup in Turkey could not find any criminal activity related to the Pak-Turk institutions in Pakistan. Parallel probes into Pak-Turk Schools & Colleges, the Kimse Yok Mu humanitarian organization, and the PakTurk Business Council found no irregularities either.

Since the attempted coup, more than 115,000 individuals had been dismissed from their functions and more than 72,198 persons detained. Around 40,000 individuals had been arrested until November 2016 in operations targeting alleged sympathizers of the Gülen movement. Human rights lawyers, organizations/associations and parliamentarians had documented widespread human rights violations, including alleged cases of extrajudicial executions, enforced disappearances, torture and other degrading treatment or punishment – targeting in particular alleged sympathizers of the Gülen movement.

From the perspective of international law, any forcible return of individuals at extreme risk to Turkey, or any other place where they face torture, ill-treatment, and where they face a real risk to their lives, violates Pakistan's obligations under international law, notably the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, to which it has been a state party since 2010.

In addition, Article 13 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to which Pakistan is also a party, aims to prevent arbitrary, collective, and mass expulsions.

This provision further confirms that aliens residing in the territory of Pakistan (as a state party) have the right to submit reasons against expulsion and to have the decision reviewed by, and to be represented before, the competent authority or someone designated by it.

An alien must be given full facilities for pursuing his remedy against expulsion.

It is in principle undeniably a matter for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan to decide who it will admit to its territory. In these circumstances however, when rightful considerations of prohibition of inhuman treatment and respect for family life arise, all 450 Turkish citizens enjoy the protection of the Covenant in relation to their livelihoods in Pakistan.

With due regard to the above concerns and following the petition by the PakTurk Education Foundation, three Honorable High courts in Pakistan temporarily halted the abrupt exit of Turkish teachers from PakTurk International Schools, while a legal challenge has been considered. As the expulsion of any foreign national remains a prerogative of states, the courts tend to not exert all the power vested in them, which may contribute to the deportation of the Turkish teachers and their family members at any time.

The Turkish teacher and their family members remaining in Pakistan have registered with the UNHCR, seeking ways for possible resettlement to third countries as the appropriate solution, rather than local integration. Subsequently, they obtained the Asylum-Seeker Certificate by the UNHCR for duration of one-year.

3.8. Nejashi Ethio-Turkish International Schools - Ethiopia

Nejashi Ethio-Turkish International Schools comprises a network of 6 private K-12 schools (3 kindergardens, a primary school and a high school in Addis Ababa, and K-12 school in Mek'ele). The first school was opened in 2004 and the schools are operated by Kaynak Educational and Medical Services P.L.C. For the 2014-15 academic sessions, the schools served approximately 1,600 students from 46 different countries.

The schools focus on teaching math, science, foreign languages, literature, and art, encompassing a healthy combination of mental, physical, and interpersonal activities undertaken in a nurturing, success-oriented atmosphere. The schools accept students from any ethnic and religious backgrounds and provide a fully secular education.

The schools are considered to be among the best educational institutions in Ethiopia, with both Ethiopian and Turkish officials at the highest levels praising the progress and the contribution the schools have provided to the education system. In 2014, the Ethiopian President praised the schools, adding that they are considered to be a major contributing factor to the education sector in the country. The preceding year (2013), the African Union Political Affairs Department honored Nejashi Ethio-Turkish Schools in Ethiopia with a certificate of appreciation in recognition of their “contribution to mutual understanding and peace in Africa.”

Aftermath of the July 15th coup attempt

On December 28, 2016 the prime minister of Ethiopia received the Turkish Economy Minister. At this meeting the issue of the Nejashi Ethio-Turkish International Schools was raised. The Turkish minister had allegedly informed the Prime Minister of Ethiopia that “there are legal grounds” for the transfer of schools, without elaborating on the details of the eventual “transfer.”

Following the meeting the Prime Minister of Ethiopia reported on January 10, 2017 that “it was initially the government of Turkey that recommended the opening of the schools, and in order to preserve the best interest of children registered in these schools the legal transfer should be done in a way that does not affect them.”

3.9. Mohamed al-Fatih Group - Morocco

Educational institutions belonging to the Mohamed al-Fatih Group were established in Morocco in 1994, in the cities of Tangier, Tetouan, Fez, El Jadida and Casablanca. The eight schools of the group admitted nearly 3,000 students annually, in primary, secondary, and high schools. In Casablanca alone three schools had nearly 2,500 students, with the majority (2,470 students) Moroccan citizens.

The English program was part of the official curriculum of these schools, duly approved by the Moroccan Ministry of National Education the educational staff was Moroccan. The schools provided quality education in line with international programs and educational goals, while preserving Morocco’s cultural values.

Aftermath of the July 15th attempted coup

In the beginning of August 2016 Turkey's Ambassador to Morocco informed the Moroccan authorities that Turkey was ready to cooperate with the country to shut down the Gülen-linked institutions. He further added that Moroccan authorities "are aware of the activities of Gulen movement in the Kingdom."

Later that month a Turkish delegation consisting of three AKP members of the Turkish parliament visited Morocco to "warn" Moroccan authorities about what they described as "dangers and risks" the Gulen movement may pose to the interests of the countries where it is present.

According to press reports the Turkish MP-s met with several Moroccan officials, including the leader of the ruling government coalition. During a press conference at the Turkish Embassy in Rabat, the members of the Turkish parliament emphasized that Gulen's movement "is not only a threat to Turkey, but also to all countries where the movement organizes its activities."

On January 5, 2017, the Moroccan Minister of the Interior stated that "Investigations into the institutions of the Mohamed al-Fatih Group linked to Fethullah Gülen have revealed that the schools were spreading the 'ideology' and ideas of the Gülen movement, ideology and ideas which contradict the educational system and religious principles of Morocco. In view of the failure to comply with the warnings issued by the Ministry of Education to remedy the recorded shortcomings, it was decided to close all the schools belonging to this group within a maximum period of one month."

The Ministry of the Interior did not elaborate on which “shortcomings” had been recorded, how many times the government had “warned” the schools and how many schools or pupils were impacted by the decision. But he assured the citizens that government will “work to ensure that these students continue their studies” in other institutions. Contacted by parents school officials informed them that they had received no warning from competent state institutions.

Parents of students studying in Mohamed al-Fatih schools across Morocco were stunned and called the decision a disaster, since students were in the middle of their school year. Students and parents alike were shocked and panicked, as the schools were slated to close just a few days before the quarterly exam evaluations. For the students in particular the decision posed a great challenge, since it would be very difficult for them to find schools on such short notice. It will not be easy for them to successfully finish their studies.

Closed private educational establishments were a choice and frequented mainly by the middle-class, who often made enormous efforts and sacrificed at great expense, just to provide their children quality education.

Surely nobody believed the government narrative about the alleged “shortcomings” of the schools. Having observed the school curricula for many years and following the progress of their children many parents stressed that “there was indeed no problem with the schools and they were not related to any ideology or policy.”

Decrying the decision of the government school officials stated they had only strictly followed the Moroccan curriculum, the Moroccan Ministry of Education program, and the school staff is Moroccan. They had not run afoul of the government during 22 years in the country.

The abrupt move to close the schools in the middle of the school year at the request of the Turkish government would, according to some local newspaper, “cement” the Turkish government’s official support of Morocco’s position on the Western Sahara, where Turkish pro-government businessmen have pledged different investments.

3.10. Yavuz Selim School Group – Senegal

The Yavuz Selim School Group began in 1996 with the creation of the Association “BAŞKENT EĞİTİM - International Association for Development and Solidarity among Peoples,” which was intended to support the establishment of schools.

The schools began operating in 1997 with the opening of the first secondary school. By 2016 the group had grown to include 15 schools attended by 2,432 students who were taught by a staff of 249 teachers. Classes were taught in both French and English, while Turkish courses were also offered. The schools hoped to foster, dialogue between the two cultures.

At the national level the schools taught fraternity and contributed to dialogue and openness. They were among the best quality educational institutions in the country and served as role models for their students an average of 99 percent of its students gained entrance to universities. Their success had been praised in the past at the highest levels of government by both, Turkish and Senegalese authorities. Internationally, the schools provided an opportunity for students to successfully represent Senegal and its educational achievements.

Aftermath of the July 15th attempted coup

Following weeks of pressure,<sup>136</sup> on August 24, 2016, the Turkish Government Council for Economic Relations with Senegal carried out an “emergency mission” to Dakar, Senegal. They went to request the closure of 15 Schools from the Yavuz Selim School Group, which were deemed close to the Gülen movement.

On December 8, 2016 the Vice-President of Turkey's Maarif Foundation stated<sup>137</sup> that his organization signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Senegalese government to transfer the Yavuz Selim School Group institutions under its management.

The same day (December 8, 2016) the Minister of Education unofficially informed the management of the Yavuz Selim School Group that the Minister of the Interior issued a decree repealing Decree 1999, which authorized the establishment of the Yavuz Selim educational institutions.

He further stated that there had been no complaints about the activity of the schools (which focused on science and bilingual education) or their educational program, which has always been consistent with all existing regulations. The government was however keen to ensure that the best interests of the students was preserved in any case.

Expressing dismay at the decision to close the schools - parents, school management and shareholders of the group reported that a written decision had not reached them yet. They expressed further to serious concerns about the disruption of the school process and the impact on the students; as well as the troubling news that the Maarif Foundation might eventually take over the schools and turn them into failed institutions. This group reported that the government's decision would be challenged before the Supreme Court.

Faced with constant pressure from the Turkish government to close the schools, as well as the public outrage and the prospective of eventually being dragged into a long court process, on December 27, 2016, the Minister of Education clarified that "the government of Senegal did not intend to close the schools of the Yavuz Selim Group."

According to the Minister, the fact that the government had been silent on the issue was due to the fact that "the government was studying the best solution to safeguard the interests of pupils and parents and to ensure the right to education." As a result of the study, the government had decided not to close the schools, but rather "change their management," which according to him would hardly represent any "change", since 389 out of the 450 employees were in fact Senegalese.

Finally the Minister revealed there were ongoing negotiations on the fate of the schools, which allowed "a certain number of guarantees to be preserved." The parents, according to the Minister, "must trust the government to safeguard the interests of Senegal in the negotiations."

3.11. Bédir Private School Complex – Niger

The Bédir School Complex was established in 2003, in Niger with an initial class of only 40 students. The school complex has grown to host around 1000 students year round including a kindergarten, primary, and secondary.

Since its establishment the Bédir complex has been one of the best educational institutions in the country, with educational programs taught mainly in French, but also integrating English and Turkish from the primary level.

The Bédir School Complex recorded a first cycle certification rate of 72 percent at the 2006/07 academic year at the BEPC,<sup>138</sup> a rate of 97.14 percent in 2007-2008, 97.29 percent in 2008-2009, and 100 percent in 2010 and 2011. Since the 2011/12 academic year it has consistently maintained a 100 percent rate at the BEPC. The school had a rate of 100 percent for the Baccalaureate during 2009/10 and 87 percent during the 2014/15 academic year.

The students of Bédir have always distinguished themselves during national and international competitions. They have also taken part in international meetings, such as international, Turkish, English and Science Olympiads, where they have won prizes. Since 2003 the Bédir School Complex won at least 10 bronze medals, 8 silver medals, 3 gold medals and 9 special jury honors at various international competitions.

Aftermath of the attempted coup in Turkey

Following a request by the Government of Turkey, the Government of Niger decided on December 21, 2016 to withdraw the authorizations for the Bédir school complex, effectively closing the schools.

The schools filed a legal challenge against the decision before the Niamey Court of First Instance. On January 4, 2017, the Court ruled that “the occupation of the Bédir headquarters by the Nigerian State and the use of its property constitutes a manifestly unlawful assault.

Brevet d'études du premier cycle – First cycle certificate.

According to the Niamey High Court of First Instance the change of management was made without any legal procedure of expropriation for public interest against the Bédir complex.”

Finally, the Court ordered the Niger authorities to “cease their disturbances and order the provisional execution of the court decision, subject to a penalty of CFAF 1 million<sup>139</sup> per day, in case of delay.” The court also ordered the State of Niger to pay the costs.

The Senegalese press called the decision “a fine example of independence of justice, which should inspire Senegal, the latter having allegedly decided to entrust the Yavuz Selim establishments to the Maarif Foundation, a propaganda organ set up by President Erdogan to dismantle the so-called Gülen empire.”

3.12. International private school Ufuk - Benin

The international private school Ufuk was established in Cotonue, Benin, in 2006. Since then it had fully complied with the requirements of the Beninese education system by, inter alia, strictly following the Beninese school curriculum. In addition to French, the official language of Benin, English, Turkish, and Spanish are also taught, with the Turkish language not taught in exam classes. The school emphasizes the learning of computer science and almost all of its students are citizens of Benin.

<sup>139</sup>

Every year the school organizes Olympiads of mathematics to enhance knowledge and competition in the sciences. In addition, the school carries out many socio-educational and cultural activities. The students have participated in multiple science and mathematics olympiads across Benin. Many students have done well in these Olympiads and have been provided scholarships to help them continue their studies. Graduates of the school were also provided scholarships to pursue their higher education in Turkey and in different European and American schools.

In January 2015 the President of Benin Thomas Yayi Boni elevated then Director-General Abdullah Yüce to the rank of the Knight of the National Order of Benin<sup>141</sup> “for his many services rendered to the country,” in recognition of the success of the schools. In his written statement the President emphasized that “the Turkish school is the sole contributor to Benin’s reputation via its students, who are successful in international [educational] Olympiads.”

Aftermath of the July 15th coup attempt

On the 5th and 6th of December 2016, the President of the Republic of Benin paid an official 2-day visit to Turkey, signing a number of agreements/protocols/memorandums, including a Cooperation Agreement on Education.

During a press conference about the visit, President Erdogan stated that the President of the Republic of Benin “agreed” to nationalize the schools and institutions belonging to the Hizmet movements in the Republic of Benin and to transfer them to the Maarif Foundation. This claim, however, was not confirmed by the competent authorities in Benin.

On December 6, 2016 the Director-General of the Ufuk school sent an official invitation to the President of Benin, asking him to make a friendly visit to the school. The invitation was part of the dynamic friendly relations established and entertained between the Beninese authorities and the private school Ufuk.

By officially inviting the President to its premises, the Director-General of Ufuk school also wanted to pass an important message to the President; namely, do not “capitulate” to the request of the Turkish President to close the so-called Turkish schools in Africa and in particular in Benin.

The same day the Director-General of the school reassured the public and concerned parents about report on the eventual closure of the school (at the request of Turkey). He reported that the Ufuk school was not a “consular school” and it was not the result of cooperation between Benin and Turkey.

According to the Director-General, the school is owned by a Beninese private company in which five Beninese and one French citizen are shareholders and it is therefore a private, apolitical and secular investment that has nothing to do with Turkey or the Turkish government. The Turkish staff hired by the school accounts for only 10 percent of the workforce, with the rest of the staff being Beninese. All staff are recruited and have regular fixed-term contracts, all of which are renewable annually.

The Director-General informed the public that the school had no connection with the Turkish Embassy or the Turkish State and the logo of the school no longer contains the Turkish flag, which appeared in the logo after the school’s founding, in 2006, to recognize the dedication and efforts of Turkish citizens who came to Benin with the vision of establishing a school providing quality education.

PART 4

CONCLUSIONS

Consistent and ongoing reports of the government's assault on education in Turkey and abroad are a matter of serious concern. The cases documented in the present report are illustrative of a much broader pattern of governmental assault on education since the attempted coup on July 15, 2016. These abuses have been, extensively documented by many organizations, including the United Nations.

The report concludes that efforts by the Turkish government will inevitably contribute to the rise of radicalization and will have negative long-term social and political repercussions in Turkey, the volatile Middle East, and in countries where the Maarif Foundation successfully establishes itself.

Based on the analysis of the available information, it can be concluded that the Maarif Foundation, which aims to take over Gülen movement inspired schools abroad intends to use them as a springboard to further the Turkish government's political Islam agenda.

Finally, the report concludes that the Islamic transformation of the education system is likely to have long-term implications for Turkey and on the government makes about the country's political future.

August 13, 2015

In Niğde, 3 preparatory schools were closed and placed under investigation on August 13, 2015 based on claims of belonging to a “Parallel State Structure.” A team including senior officials from Police Headquarters, the Environment and Urbanization Administration, the National Education Administration, Public Health and Social Security, as well as officials from the local and tax auditors investigated two preparatory schools in the city center and one in the Bor province.

In Çanakkale security forces staged a raid on several schools and preparatory schools on the morning of August 13, 2015, including Gökkuşığı Educational Institute owned by Erişen Special Education Social Services Inc., which served as nursery, primary school and secondary school. The raid claimed to be linked to investigations into the so called “parallel structure” and was carried out by teams from Çanakkale Anti-Terrorism Security Forces, Smuggling and Organized Crime, as well as forces from Cyber Crimes unit. Simultaneously, Fem Prep School and Anafen Prep School and their branches in other provinces were also raided. In the course of operations, teams from the Taxation Office, Treasury, Public Health Administration, Social Security Institution, National Education Administration and the Environment and Urbanization Administration participated in the raids. Executives from Erişen Special Education Social Services were kept outside of the Gökkuşığı Educational Institute and were not allowed to enter the premises during the raid. They claimed not to have any prior notice about the raids nor any knowledge about what was happening inside the institutions.

September 16, 2015

On September 16, 2015 police raided preparatory schools and colleges in Kocaeli Province, east of Istanbul. Teams from the City Police Headquarters raided campuses of Fatih College in Darıca and Çayırova. Raids were carried out by teams from the Smuggling and Organized Crimes Branch, with police forces allegedly probing files and official papers at the campuses.

The same day FEM Prep Schools' branch in Gebze (Kocaeli Province) was also raided by police forces. Files and official documents were inspected during the raid, which involved over 10 police forces.

On September 16 raids were also conducted on 8 educational institutions linked to the Özel Safa Educational Institutes in Gaziantep (Southeastern Turkey). Teams from the National Education Administration, Agriculture and Breeding Administration, Health Administration, Electricity Distribution Inc., Social Security Institution, and Treasury along with officials from the Smuggling and Organized Crimes Administration participated in the raid.

According to media accounts police officers who entered the FEM Prep School in İncirliönü District were confronted by the Central Branch Manager. Amid the looks of frightened students, the FEM Prep School Central Branch Manager greeted police forces and said the following: "Bandits are all over the mountains and martyring police forces. But you are coming for the schools. Enough is enough. Enough with this oppression. I will pay you all to account in the afterlife. Pity, shame and sin. The Education Ministry came to audit us four times last year. Why are the police coming to audit us instead of the Education Ministry? This is school. There are plenty of students who are attending classes."

Police forces raided two prep schools in Antalya and took 16 individuals into custody, while 11 were later released. Educators were searched in front of students; their mobile phones were also seized. Their cars were subject to searches.

Journalists, teachers and executives at the schools and other executives were not allowed to take pictures, due to what they were told were “security reasons.” Raids during class hours had effect students, instilling fear and panic among them. Preparatory schools across Antalya Province were also subject to brutal shows of force by the police Smuggling and Organized Crimes Units. The schools included FEM Preparatory Schools (Üçgen District and Tonguç Street), Antalya Rasanet Youth Foundation and FEM Prep Schools in Antalya's central Muratpaşa Province, The schools were,known for close ties with the Gülen movement. Teams of investigators seized computers and official documents during operations allegedly carried out under “Reasonable doubt,” “liability” and “aggravated fraud.”

Annex 5 – Repression of teachers (in chronological order)

Purges, detentions, and arrests of teachers and other school personnel intensified in the aftermath of the July 15th attempted coup. Ever since then the government has conducted a widespread and unabated campaign to dismiss and prosecute tens of thousands of teachers suspected of allegedly having links to the Gülen movement or for alleged activities in support of the terrorist Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and affiliated organizations. In August 2016, acting under powers granted by the state of emergency, authorities announced and later implemented plans to release up to 38,000 prisoners (roughly one in five now in Turkish prisons) to make room for the wave of teachers, academics, journalists, lawyers, civil servants, and judges detained after the coup attempt.

A fraction of state oppression on teachers (in chronological order) is illustrated below:

E. B., a teacher by profession, was taken in custody from his home on July 24, 2016 by the Anti-Smuggling and Organized Crime Department of the Antalya Police. Family members inquired about his fate with the police department, but they were reportedly rejected and insulted. His family learned about his whereabouts only through a tip from a relative, who informed them about his presence at the Antalya Atatürk State Hospital. In addition, his family also learned about his daily trips to the intensive care unit of Sema Yazar Hospital (Antalya), between July 24-29 2016. At the hospital, he underwent surgery to repair the rupture of his intestines, due to insertion of a foreign object (reportedly a bottle) into his anus. Despite the clear evidence of torture, medical personnel were forced to issue a medical report stating that the victim was not harmed. August 12, 2016 – 25 teachers were detained and taken into custody in the Province of Edirne (Northwestern Turkey).

August 9, 2016 - Recep Demirtaş, a teacher at a state-run Istanbul school, was detained during a police raid in Istanbul's Esenyurt quarter at 6 a.m. on the morning of August 9th . From that time he disappeared and is feared to have been killed.

August 18, 2016 - Mümin Köroğlu, a physics lecturer at Ankara Police College was taken into custody for his alleged links to the July 15th coup attempt. Following his detention he appeared on photos shared through social media. He was visibly in distress, with his mouth taped shut by police officers. He was forced to make the Rabia sign. This four-fingered hand gesture was first used by Muslim Brotherhood supporters in Egypt and has recently become a symbol used by Erdoğan supporters.

August 23, 2016 - Police in the Province of Niğde (Central Anatolia) arrested 24 teachers for allegedly using ByLock, a smartphone messaging application.

August 25, 2016 – S.K., a teacher working in Bolu Province was arrested after being accused by his father (Yaşar K.) of allegedly being a “Gülenist.”
