National Center for Civil and Human Rights

A celebration of the achievements of both the American Civil Rights Movement and the global human rights movement, the Center for Civil and Human Rights is designed to inspire action and change. The bold, modern building includes immersive exhibits that begin with the 1950s Jim Crow era and the fight for equality and tie together the struggle for broader human rights worldwide. Educational programs and community discussions enhance the museum's mission.

World of Coca-Cola

This gleaming museum chronicles the history of Coca-Cola, as well as the soda industry itself. Coke is king – and ubiquitous – in the city that saw its invention in 1886 (and also houses the brand’s global corporate headquarters). True to the name, when it comes to total soda universe domination, the World of Coca-Cola is totally overwhelming in a fun, fizzy, hyper-commercialized sort of way. Check out replica soda fountains, the pop-culture museum, 4-D theater displays, and DIY beverage fountains dispensing flavors from around the world. Feeling thirsty? Pick from over 100 beverages, including all the classics and limited editions.

Georgia Aquarium

The largest indoor aquarium in the Western hemisphere doubles as a teaching hospital with over 100,000 water-loving residents. This attraction, adjacent to Centennial Park, boasts enough fresh and saltwater habitats to keep even the most attention-challenged visitor happy for hours. The aquarium's big stars include the massive whale sharks, Beluga whales, dolphins, and penguins. There's a free self-guided tour app available for download that will navigate you through the exhibits.

Stone Mountain

Nestled in 3200 acres of natural beauty, Stone Mountain Park features outdoor recreational activities, seasonal family-friendly attractions, and a variety of on-site lodging options so you can stay where you play! Only minutes from downtown Atlanta, come explore our breathtaking natural areas, experience our family-friendly park attractions and enjoy our seasonal festivals and special events.

Atlanta Botanical Garden

Pretty flowers are just the beginning at this 30-acre botanical center bordering the northeast side of the city's largest public park. Traipse through oak, hickory, and poplar treetops on the 600-foot Canopy Walk footbridge suspended 40 feet above the blooming hydrangeas, perennials, and bulbs below. Afraid of heights? Go zen in an authentic Japanese garden dating back to the 1960s and featuring a 300-year-old lantern, a gurgling waterfall, and a seasonal rotation of irises, azaleas, and maples.

Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historical Park

The Martin Luther King centre is the must-see tourist attraction in Atlanta. Once 'The King Centre,' it is now a nonprofit organization in the heart of the city, as a place for education and social change. There's plenty to do here – get a guided tour through Dr. King's birth home, where you can still see actual furniture from his childhood, and check out exhibitions on offer about Dr. King, Mahatma Gandhi and Coretta Scott King. There's also guided sermons a little further down at Ebenezer Baptist Church, which is the exact spot Dr. King preached from 1947 and for the rest of his life.

Krog Street Market

A handful of the city's most buzzed-about food makers and restaurateurs have put down roots in a former cast-iron stove factory.

Jimmy Carter Presidential Library and Museum

The life and presidency of Georgia native Jimmy Carter are celebrated throughout the 24,000 square feet of this museum. The grounds and modernist building are impressive, and within the museum, you'll find interactive exhibits covering President Carter's life before, during, and after his time in the White House. His Nobel Peace Prize is on display, with exhibitions dedicated to his charitable work.

Fernbank Museum of Natural History

Between the stunning atrium featuring a suspended life-scale brontosaurus skeleton and swank after-hours events, Fernbank isn't just a school-trip destination. Walk through swampland and foothill dioramas populated with prehistoric, Mesozoic, and modern-day flora and fauna in the crowd-pleasing exhibit "A Walk Through Time in Georgia" or take in a larger-than-life educational 3D IMAX film.

Ponce City Market

The massive former Sears & Roebuck building, erected in 1926, has been repurposed into one of Atlanta's most exciting mixed-use developments. You can spend all day here, browsing big-name retailers, small local boutiques, and a roster of buzzy restaurants and food stalls (featuring several James Beard award-winning chefs). Catch a show at the RoleCall Theater, check out the farmers market, exercise your brain at a Trivia Night (or your bod at the gym) or hang out at the rooftop bar. You can even stay at the market in one of the many available rentals.

Morgan Falls Overlook Park

Catch a beautiful sunset at Morgan Falls Overlook Park. The 30-acre riverside park includes picnic pavilions, a playground, restrooms, boat dock, hiking trail, fire pit, porch swings and scenic views.
